

think it's best for all concerned."
 "You're sure, are you? It's not a dream, or anything like that? She isn't trying to trap me?"
 "No, sir. May I ask her to come in? She's just behind the hedge."
 "Did Bob see her?"
 "No; he was so busy talking with his father, sir, that he did not recognize us as we passed. Seems to be most earnest, sir, his father."
 "Rankin, if you're certain, bring her in. But if—"
 "I'm quite certain, sir."

Jackson waited for them near the entrance to the verdant circle. He thought it better not to go back to the house. Even if the lady was quite reconciled there still might be some details of her conversation which he would not care to have heard by the girls—especially one of the girls.

Almost immediately Rankin returned with Mrs. Gerard, not only walking by his side, but clinging to his arm. Her voice did not sound warlike as she greeted Broadway. "How do you do, Jackson?" she said quietly.

"How do you do, Mrs. Gerard?"
 "Has Rankin told you?"
 "Yes, Mrs. Gerard; Rankin has told me."

She really seemed very much upset but not belligerently so. "I'd never be happy if New York should imagine I'd been jilted, or the subject of a practical joke," she began simply. "My excuse for throwing you over is a very good one—my engagement to the earl of Cortland."

He bowed, too puzzled to find any words.

"After a few hours' talk with Rankin I became convinced that a marriage between you and me never would have been a happy one."

Again Broadway nodded. He could quite agree with that.

"Hence my decision to marry the earl." She went closer to him almost pleadingly. "I've played fair with you, Jackson; now I want you to do the same by me."

"I'll do anything you ask," he fervently, assured her. "Anything within reason, Mrs. Gerard."

"All I ask is that you keep my secret."

"I will. What is it?"
 "You really don't know?"
