"The Conspiracy," by Robert Baker and John Emerson, a melodrama which is being played at the Utah, and which will be seen for the last time tomorrow evening, is a new crook play set as usual, in New York, during the police investigation by Whitman.

Unlike many of the crook plays we have seen following the campaign against white slavery, there is little in this that is repellent and it is intensely dramatic in every act interspersed with enough humor to let the audience down a little between thrills. Mr. Mackay generously stepped aside during the week to give Wilson Reynolds the opportunity to play the lead, and he makes the most of it playing the part of Clavering admirably.

Nothing Miss Kemble has done in her work here, has displayed her talents more vividly than that as the stenographer who is the murderess. She has created tremendous interest at every performance. Charles Mackay has an easy part as the reporter, and plays it effectively, and others in the cast complete the good work.

An innovation is announced by the management beginning with the next production. Heretofore the change of bill has occurred on Sunday night of each week, but hereafter the change will be made on Monday evening. Therefor, "The Conspiracy" will be repeated Sunday evening and "Field by the Enemy" will usher in the fifth week of the season at the Utah.

EMPRESS

The new bill at the Empress announced for next week is headed by Add Hoyt's minstrel jubilee, with a cast of seven former minstrel stars, including Bruce Wallace, John Forsman, Leo Pelletier, Walter Van Allen, John Thomas, Herbert Clark and Mr. Hoyt himself.

The bill will also include Vivian Murray and Grace St. Clair, who will present a musical comedy tabloid of stage life, entitled "Broadway Love." Miss St. Clair was formerly the ingenue of the New York company of "The Lure." Estelle Rose will be seen in a number of character songs and new gowns.

They-Yan-Da, a graduate of Carlisle University, and a full-blooded Sioux Indian, possesses a baritone voice, and his monologue and native dances have made his an unusual act; the Three Brownies are a trio of young dancers, and William Armstrong and Ernest Ford are vaudeville favorites whose act this year is said to contain new material.

These six acts, together with a number of selected photoplays, constitute next week's bill, opening Monday afternoon and closing Sunday night.

The current program at the Empress closes with the performances of today and Sunday. The famous Jackson Family of Cyclists head the program, and featured on the bill with them is Espy, Europe's foremost artillery juggler; Ralton and Latour, in a musical revue, featuring the Scotch brigade; Lerner and Ward, "The Melba and Cursus of vaudeville;" the Roland West players in the dramatic sketch, "The Criminal," and the Empire Comedy Trio in hilarious harmony.

"Why don't you Bostonians install cabaret features?" asked the New York man.

"What are they?"

"Bits of entertainment in restaurants while you eat."

"The idea seems attractive," murmured the Hubbit. "We could have short talks on psychological research and brief reading from Browning, eh?"—Judge.
