

Sanitary and Artistic Nursery Furnishings

SANITATION, of the most up to date order has been the fetish of modern nursery furnishings. Recently another fad which goes hand in hand with this scientific cleanliness has come along and bids fair to sweep all of the older methods to the wind.

The physical makeup of the twentieth century baby, or at least the nervous part of its anatomy, is responsible for this change. The king of the nursery is now supposed to be born nervous, or at least he has this prevalent fashionably falling thrust upon him by his devoted mother and doting relatives, who one and all join forces in declaring, "The darling is nothing but a small bundle of nerves."

To soothe and strengthen the infantile nervous system the specialists now require his surroundings to be of the most quieting nature. This not only applies to physical treatment, but to the actual furnishing of the nursery or room given over to this autocrat. Besides being all that sanitation can make it, the nursery, according to the latest canons of art and hygiene, must be all white; no color must be visible in any part of the apartment to distract the tiny occupant.

His mind must lay dormant until sufficient physical strength will admit of the little brain being put to work. A truce is sounded to Greenway fittings. Mother Goose dances and frizzes and the pictorial education which took its start in erstwhile nurseries from prints of Madonnas and like subjects hung in conspicuous places. These "educators" will have their place and season later on, but for the first year at least of his majesty's life all color is banished. This white is not of a cold, chalky tone, but is of a creamy, ivory tint. The walls of the nursery, which should be rough finished, are painted in this color. A most attractive frieze runs above the painted wall for a depth of about three feet, done in an indefinite, shadowy, wavy design, carried out in the varying tones of creams and whites.

The floor is laid with a white tiled linoleum, and this is wiped with a damp cloth every morning and not swished with a bucketful of water periodically. To banish the laundry apron appearance of the floor, soft white fur rugs are spread under the bassinet and larger pieces of furniture.

The modern baby does not know the luxury of being rocked to sleep, but to date white nursery the crib is of white enamel, without the least suspicion of gold knobs or trimmings. If luxury is a rule in the appointments of with white linen shades and sash curtains of dainty net.

To come back to the baby's crib, the sheets used upon it are of the finest carpets—linen is too cold and slippery—beautifully monogrammed in a small design with the tiny occupant's initial letters surrounded by a wreath of some flower suggestive of his name. The blankets are of the finest Arizona wool bound with wide white ribbon. The spread is a beauty made of heavy linen exquisitely embroidered. Of course this covering is not in commission when the baby is occupying his sleeping quarters, as it would be too cumbersome and stiff. The object of its being made of the material mentioned is because of its washable qualities, and, again, several of these spreads may be provided, and daintiness be assured at small expense.

Froisart in his interesting chronicles speaks of a silver cradle and its accompaniment of a silver bathing tub, whatever this attachment may be, as among the frequently to be met with accessories of a wealthy family. Our own times have furnished some elaborate specimens in the cradle line. A multimillionaire's baby now reposes in a crib of mother-of-pearl with gold and ivory mountings.

In the white sanitary nursery the tiny chifferoni and dressing table are of enameled wood, and the nurse's chairs are of wicker painted in an ivory tone. A pretty little screen to cut off the air when baby is bathing stands in a convenient corner and completes the actual furnishings of this charmingly dainty and artistic apartment.

The things which may be bought in the way of baby's toilet accessories are almost limitless. The oddest kind of a bathtub that is still used is the old fashioned one of wood with a partition in the middle and a tall basket handle. About the sides of the bowl are painted miniature Cupids. Each partition of the bowl holds about a quart of water.

The handsomest toilet sets consist of twenty-seven pieces, but the average baby's toilet is made with a set of seven articles. Extravagance runs riot in these accessories, and the millionaire infant outfit has his toilet articles of gold or silver set with gems. Just as attractive and much more sensible, even where money is no consideration, is the celluloid toilet set having sprays of forgetmenots painted on its different pieces. The newest sets of celluloid are painted with lucky hearts in delicate shades of green.

The weighing scales must not be forgotten. The latest scale designs are tall and slender, standing on the ground, and the weighing part rests upon a low table built especially for it. On these scales the baby is weighed every week.

The measuring stick is another necessity and is a yard long and painted with cute children's figures. Some of the sticks are lettered, "How high will the baby grow?"

Then come triple mirrors to hang on the wall. They are small and designed for the baby's use, the nurse holding the top up every day to survey himself back and front. The usefulness of this proceeding is not evident to the average person outside of the baby culture cult.

All these sanitary and newfangled ideas will not supplant in the heart of most mothers their love of dainty frou-frou things for the king or queen of the nursery. They will cling with pleasure to the toilet basket of net lace trimmed and ribboned and to the crib with its curtains of muslin and ruffles of lace looped up with huge bows of satin ribbon.

BREAKFAST GEMS.—Beat three eggs and to them add one pint of milk, with one teaspoonful of sugar and half a teaspoonful of salt. Pour these gradually upon two cupfuls of sifted flour and heat until smooth. Add one teaspoonful of melted butter. Butter gem pans, put them in the oven until hot, then fill two-thirds with the batter. Bake twenty minutes in a quick oven.

Pancakes.—Have ready mixed and sifted one-half cupful of ordinary wheat flour, one-quarter cupful of Graham or whole wheat flour, a tablespoonful of salt and a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder. When ready to bake add one egg (lightly beaten), one cupful of milk and a teaspoonful of melted butter. Have the griddle hot and well greased and drop the batter from the tip of the spoon. Cook until a nice brown on one side, then turn on the other. Serve with maple syrup.

Rice Crumpets.—Beat three eggs until light and add one and a half cupfuls of milk and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Stir in one cupful of boiled rice, one cupful of corn flour, half a cupful of wheat flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and a level teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in large crumpet rings on top of the stove or in greased gem pans in a quick oven twenty minutes.

Gluten Gems.—Two cupfuls of gluten flour, one pint of milk, one egg, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix the flour and salt, add the milk and stir into the dry mixture. Add the baking powder, beat well, fill greased gem pans two-thirds full and bake in a quick oven.

How to Be Popular.

Be natural. People are quick to discern affectation of any kind and have a contempt for it; so give up affectation.

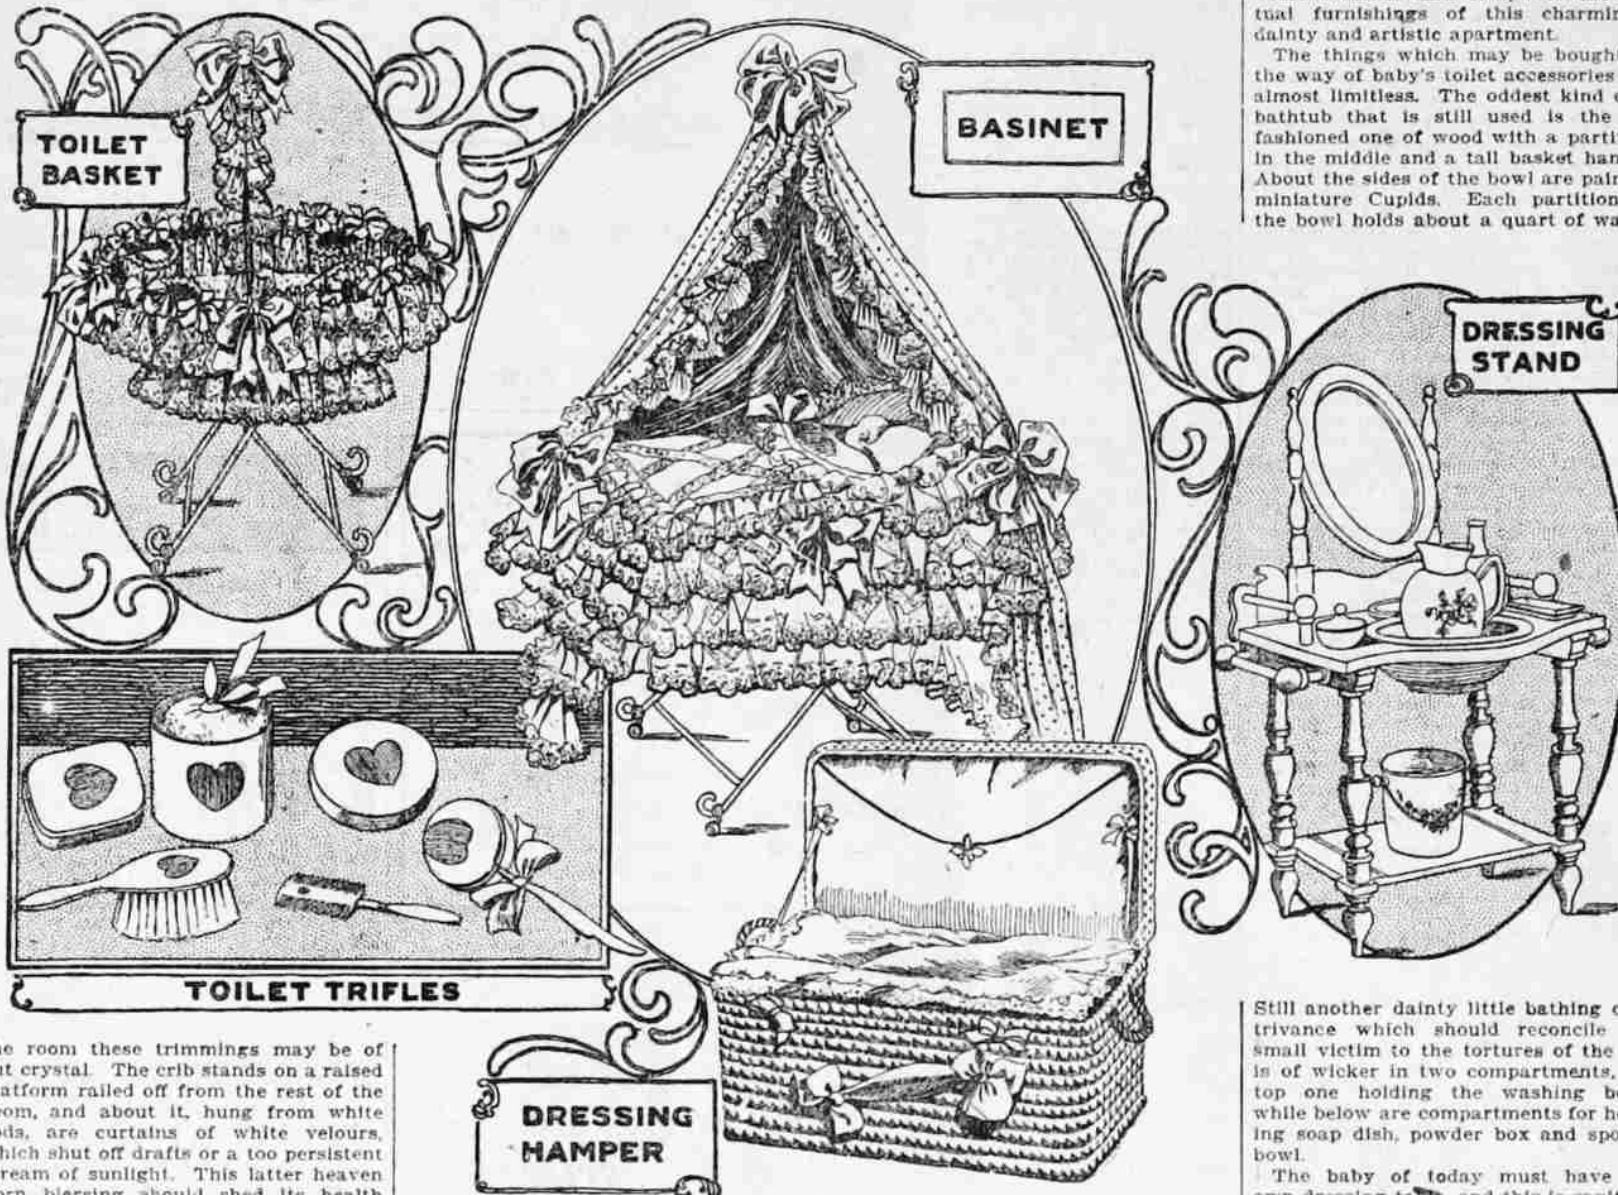

Be neat. There is great charm in neatness.

Be affectionate and sympathetic and don't be self-conscious and ashamed to show either quality.

Be home loving and kind to all old people, poor people and children. These are womanly qualities, and all love and admire the womanly girl.

Don't have "moods." Avoid the blues. People like to know how to find a girl, not to have to renew her acquaintance every time they meet.

Be athletic, as that means health, and healthiness means wholesomeness.

the room these trimmings may be of cut crystal. The crib stands on a raised platform raised off from the rest of the room, and about it, hung from white rods, are curtains of white velours, which shut off drafts or a too persistent stream of sunlight. This latter heaven born blessing should shed its health giving rays all over the nursery, and Still another dainty little bathing contrivance which should reconcile the small victim to the tortures of the tub is of wicker in two compartments, the top one holding the washing bowl, while below are compartments for holding soap dish, powder box and sponge bowl.

The baby of today must have his own dressing table, and this is sanitary and untrimmed. It consists of a round, low table covered with a linen spread

THE WORLD'S SKIN CURE

Sold Wherever Civilization Has Penetrated

From a small beginning in the simplest form, Cuticura Remedies have become the greatest curatives of their time, and, in fact, of all time, for nowhere in the history of medicine is to be found another approaching them in popularity and sale.

In every clime and with every people Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills have met with the same reception. They have conquered the world. By rail and sail, by caravan, by saddle, and on the backs of human beings, they have made their way to the farthestmost parts of the earth.

There seems to be something about Cuticura Remedies which invites the confidence of mankind. National peculiarities, European, Eastern, and Asiatic teachings and traditions seem to have no adverse influence upon them. Hence they are to be found in every part of the world, and the sight of them in the bazaars and native shops of foreign lands has inspired the American traveller with patriotic emotions second only to those produced by the contemplation of his country's flag.
