J. W. Walker, policeman, Randolph St., Lexington, Va., says: "I can't say too much for Doan's Kidney Pills. I am glad to confirm what I said about them in my previous statement of some years ago. For a long time I had been troubled by weakness across my back and a dull, miserable aching in my loins. I had heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and finally I got some at B. H. Gorrell's Drug Store. Two or three boxes, I forgot which, cured me."

CHINESE ARE POOR SOLDIERS

Aversion to Being Ordered is One of the Most Prominent Traits of an Oriental.

The Chinese is a poor soldier. Not that he is lacking in courage, for on occasions he cheerfully sells himself as substitute and goes willingly to the executioner's ax in order to provide his parents with the small sum necessary to support them through life, writes H. H. Windsor in Popular Mechanics. The strength of an army is in teamwork, and here is where he falls on account of his aversion to being ordered. This is found in his domestic and industrial work. A general line of policy or desired results can be laid down and he will faithfully work in accordance therewith, but he dislikes to be followed up through the details of the work with frequent orders. He will produce excellent results—but they must be accomplished in his own way. Hence the essence of good militarism—prompt and unquestioned obedience—comes in direct conflict with his nature, and makes him a poor soldier. However, this trait is not entirely wanting in other nationalities, as every business man knows to his sorrow, and the difficulty of getting employes to do a thing in the prescribed way is one of the constant anxieties.

Don't You Remember? The love of reminiscence is deep-rooted in us. We do not need to have length of years in order to possess it. All we need to have is a consciousness of the past as past. Some years ago a little friend of mine, then four years old, attained a new phrase, "Don't you remember?" I say "attained," because it was evident that she had not only enlarged her field of expression by a new word, but that she had enlarged her field of experience by a new sensation—the sensation of reminiscence. For the phrase, "Don't you remember?" always ushered in a story out of her small past, some event of the preceding winter or summer, some glimpse of history in which she had been actor witness. It was always uttered with shining eyes and a flush of delight, which deepened if I was able to catch her reminiscence and recognize and enjoy it with her. Yet the things remembered were very simple—a drive, a walk, a kitten, a child watering his garden or falling down. The pleasure came, clearly, not from the original quality of the experience, but from the very act of remembering. She was tasting the pure pleasure of reminiscence. Watching her, I fell to wondering what was the precious quality of this pleasure whose flavor she was beginning to taste.—Atlantic Monthly.

Should He? During a discussion of the fitness of things in general some one asked: "If a young man takes his best girl to the grand opera, spends $8 on a supper after the performance, and then takes her home in a taxicab, should he kiss her good night? An old bachelor who was present growled. "I don't think she ought to expect it. Seems to me he has done enough for her."—Lippincott's.

WHO WANTS TO OCCUPY IT?

English Hotels Seem to Have Queer Idea as to the Popularity of a Hearse.

Some of the hotelkeepers "on the other side" have peculiar ways of advertising their houses, and one of the most singular of these methods is the statement in their advertisements that the hotel is equipped with a hearse! Inasmuch as the American hotelkeeper is only looking for "live ones," it is not of record that hearses have been used as attractions in this country as yet. One of the English catering journals in speaking of this custom, recently said: "We have on several occasions commented upon the uncanny mixing up of the funeral traffic business with hotel keeping—an unholy combination to be met with in some northern parts of Ireland. Apropos, here is an enticing advertisement from a Sligo paper calculated to bring quite a rush of guests anxious to test the accommodation: "Mrs. —, proprietress of the — hotel, begs to announce that she has added to her establishment a glass hearse."

Joy in Effort. In ancient Greece the victors at the contests of various sorts won great honor. These contests were called games, but the men who won in them did not win through play, but only by strenuous preparation, through real and often prolonged work. This preparation required patience and persistence that there might be a constant advance in strength and skill. Testimonies to the effort that the liveliest exercise of strength and skill gives the greatest of known joy are very numerous. In the Century magazine there is a sonnet written to accompany a bas-relief by A. Tait McKenzie, with the title "The Joy of Effort." The picture is of three hurdlers clearing the bar. The poem tells of their eagerness, their impetuosity their joy in fleetness. The last two lines, a couplet, read, "For men 'tis not enough to be alive; the noblest joy of being is to strive."

"IDEAS" NOT ENOUGH

Employer Likely to Be Satisfied Only When Tangible Results Are Forthcoming.

DREAMER OF LITTLE VALUE

Object Lesson in Case Recorded Here—Bookkeeper Had Many Plans But in No Case Had He Made an Effort to Carry Them Out.

Jamison, the third bookkeeper, approached the desk of his employer and stood there hesitatingly. "I came in to find out if I couldn't get a little raise," he began, when the opportunity came. "I've been working here—"

The employer raised a hand. "Jamison," he said, "I have been intending to raise your salary for some time—and I have been holding off in the hope that you would deserve a better raise than the one I am about to give you. Now, sit down. I want to have a little talk with you."

Jamison's face lighted at the ease with which he had won. "Thank you," he said, as he seated himself. "I'm glad to know that I've been doing good work and—"

"You're the worst disappointment I have had in this office in the last ten years," the employer cut in sharply. "I am giving you your raise simply because you are a disappointment. Now let me say what I started out to say."

"When you came here a year ago I thought I had found a prize. Remember the day that I stopped by your desk over there and asked you how you were getting along? You answered me with alertness, and almost swept me off my feet with the flood of ideas that you were going to put into execution. You will remember that I told you to go ahead and put your ideas into execution—whether they won or not. I want a man to come to me with ideas. I'm willing to lose a little money experimenting on him."

Jamison attempted to say something, but the employer went on:

"Three weeks later I was again by your desk. The day I had left you I had prophesied to myself within a month that you would be managing the whole office instead of doing book-keeping. But three weeks of that time had gone by and I had not seen any results that would justify me in sitting up nights to think what a great manager you were. Not one of those ideas had shown any working. You had simply told me of them and then forgotten them."

"That day we talked together again. You had an entire new set of dreams of things you were going to do. I waited a month, but nothing turned up. Two months later I remember we chatted together a few moments. You were the possessor of a new set of plans which nobody but yourself could carry out. Well, I waited for you to do some carrying, but nothing occurred. And that, Jamison, is why you are still in the position you had when you began with this firm—and it is also why I call you my greatest disappointment. You're fast in the head and slow on your feet. I suppose you have another batch of hunches cooked up for me right this minute, their only trouble being that you're the man who must carry them out, and you will get tired before you begin. Isn't that true?"

"Well, I've got some ideas all right," Jamison said. "Now, for instance—"

The employer stopped him. "I've got a better idea than any of yours," he said. "And that is for you to go and carry out some of your plans first; then tell me about them afterward."

"Yes, sir," said Jamison, meekly.
