Sutherland will be Tried at Abingdon

Abingdon, Va., Feb. 30.—The case of W. C. D. Sutherland, the Clintwood bank cashier, who is charged with being responsible for the wrecking of the National bank of Clintwood has been transferred from the federal court at Big Stone Gap to the federal court at Abingdon, and will come on trial in May. Sutherland, it was said, after having closed the doors of the bank, posted upon them the words "Gone to Tall Timber," then disappeared. It is now denied that he posted any such words on the door, but the disappearance is a matter of fact. He was later located in West Virginia, where he was arrested. It is said that at the hearing at Big Stone Gap, Sutherland put up a strong defense, making it appear that he was probably not alone in the responsibility for the failure of the bank. At any rate, the defense was so strong that the jury was unable to agree and a mistrial was declared.

Town Election Declared Void

An opinion was handed down in the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals last week, holding in favor of a writ of mandamus against the town of Clintwood. The court gave out that mandamus for the purpose of ordering the town to hold a town election on the 15th of May. The court held that the town had failed to hold an election on the 15th of May, and that the court would order the town to hold an election on that date. The court also held that the town's failure to hold an election on that date was a violation of the law, and that the court would order the town to hold an election on that date.
