James Monroe Flanary Dead.

James Monroe Flanary, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Lee county, died very suddenly Monday morning at his home at Dot, from a severe attack of lagriple. Mr. Flanary had only been sick for a week, and his illness was not considered of a serious nature, until heart trouble set in.

The deceased, who was about 80 years of age, was well known in Big Stone Gap, and his news of his sudden death was a great shock to his many friends and relatives here. He was one of the Gap's pioneer settlers, having lived here during the civil war, but moved to Lee county about 25 years ago, where he has been exceedingly prosperous. Mr. Flanary was an uncle of Congressman C. B. Stump and a grandfather of Mrs. Bradley Yearly, of this place. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, Miss Florence Flanary, Mrs. James Olinger, El Kanah and James Flanary, all of whom live in Lee county.

Burial took place in the family burying ground Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The groom is a competent employee of the Virginia and Tennessee Telephone Company, having come here a year ago from Greenville, Tenn. They are staying at present at the residence Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Deering Disc Harrow

Deering tillage implements are designed and built along the most practical lines, and are the best that can be had for the price. Time and again it has been shown that the disc harrow is the most valuable implement the farmer can use. He will realize by its proper use he can force the soil to yield its full share of the golden grain where it formerly produced little.

We want every farmer in this section who is thinking of buying a disc harrow to call around and look over our line.
