A Case for an Expert
LIKE the proposition to increase the size of the United States Senate to 1,000 members, the guaranty of a right to employment for an expert, as provided in the plan to which President Wilson has given his approbation, is under consideration by the Radical members of Congress. The suggestion that before a declared national emergency, a person of superior qualifications already has a right to employment, is a necessary corollary of a radical system of jurisprudence. It would be a good thing to have a place of employment for experts. The attempt to provide a higher standard of life for the people of this country has been made without the consideration of the experts. It would be a good thing if the Experts Board were firmly established in the matter. The Board of Experts would be an advisory board, an educational organization, a police force. It would be a good thing if the Experts Board were firmly established in the matter. The Board of Experts would be an advisory board, an educational organization, a police force. Its services would cost the people very little. The Expert Board would be a good thing for the people of the United States. The Expert Board would be a good thing for the people of the United States.
