ORIGINAL SPEECH.
In All Probability It Consisted Exclusively of Vowel Sounds and Had No Consonants.

The original speech, the true primal tongue of man, was quite unlike any language we have ever heard; yet we have all the tongues of to-day says the New York Sun. The primeval language was a vowel language altogether; it had no consonants, or consonants, or contacts as we ought to call them at all. Its words consisted of vowel sounds following each other, repeated or varied—or words like aeoia, aua, auu, aeioa, iaui, ioia, ouou, uaua, uene—all of which, I may say in passing, are taken from a language in use to-day. The sentences were intermittent streams of vowels, each stream held on as long as the speaker's breath allowed or whim dictated. When all literature was recited, the same consideration, the capacity of the lungs, determined the length of the bardic line; so we have our shokos, our hexameters, our Alexandrines, and so forth, each a lung-full of verse; in the primeval tongue it was likewise, but the sentences were vowels only.
 There are about ten or a dozen pure vowels to go upon, and vowel words may run up to five syllables, so we have a very considerable fund to draw on for our vowel streams. And these streams of vowel speech corresponded to, and expressed, streams of emotion or feeling, rather than descriptions of concrete objects. For we hardly realize how terribly overlaid with material trifles our life is to-day, and therefore what great demands we make on language for concrete words. But our exclamations, each of which indicates a single emotion, tend to remain pure vowel sounds even at the present day.

THE ISLE GETS SMALLER.
 Something Interesting About Shrinkage of the Island of Great Britain.

With regard to the east coast a sorry story has to be told. The county of Yorkshire, for instance, from Bridlington to Spurn Head, has been disappearing. It is calculated, at an average rate of six feet a year. It is said that careful observation of a certain 12-mile stretch shows that the cliffs 40 feet high have been eaten away by the waves for 132 feet in 40 years, says Good Words. It is, however, at Spurn Head that the greatest ravages have taken place.
 In Edward I's time the village of Ravenspur, a seaport near Spurn Head, sent more than one member to parliament; in 1399 and 1471 Henry IV, and Edward IV, respectively, landed there, but very soon after the latter's visit the entire town was swept away by the sea. To-day the village of Kilssea alone stands upon the head; the old site of the village—once a fair place on a hill, with a fine old church, destroyed by the waves, in 1826—is now some hundreds of yards below high-water mark, and when New Kilssea joins it the sea and the Humber will not take long to destroy the entire promontory and make things very unpleasant at Grimsby. The Blue Bell inn, half way between the sea and the river, bears a stone upon which is inscribed: "Built in the year 1847, 534 yards from the sea." When measured early last spring the distance was 334 yards.

GIRLS LAUGH AT RED TAPE.
 Seminary Students from New England Invade a Government Building in Spite of Protest.

At Washington the other day 25 students from a girl's seminary in a New England state forced their way into the state, war and navy buildings after hours, pushing aside the remonstrating watchman by a sort of wedge which strongly suggested football practice or knowledge.
 The girls arrived after the two o'clock closing time, and being told by the officials they were too late to visit, were about to leave. One of the number in the outer edge of the bunch took command and gave a short, sharp order. "Push him aside now." That was obeyed instantly. They had been grouped in a sort of "V" in front of the doorway, and as they swept through it, those in the rear with their hands on the shoulders of the girls in front, they almost brushed the grizzled old veteran off his feet and left him so dazed that he did not even remonstrate when they laughed at his discomfiture.
 No official report was made of this violent infraction of the rules, but the watchman evidently thought the fair trespassers were sufficiently punished in that the warship models which they said was one of the special objects of their visit have not yet been returned from the Paris exposition.

Teaching Parrots by Phonograph.
 A bird fancier in London is using a phonograph to teach parrots how to talk. He educates about 46 birds a month by this method entirely. The parrot's class-room is divided up into little compartments, which are kept dark. Each bird is placed in a separate compartment, and two or three times a day a phonograph is left with it. The machine is automatic and will repeat a sentence or a number of sentences over and over again for hours, so that the birds very soon learn to imitate the weird mechanical voice that comes out of the darkness.

In Honor of the Queen.
 When ex-Queen Liliuokalani visited the Island of Maui not long ago for the first time in ten years the steamship which carried her was surrounded by natives bringing gifts of all kinds, fruit, vegetables, fowls and even pigs. There were music, dancing, a great feast, and the whole steamship was decorated with their garlands.

A Feminine Talker.
 Small Boy—Mom wants a loaf of stale bread ter make stuffin' with for our turkey.
 Baker—We have no stale bread left.
 "No bread?"
 "Nothing but fresh bread."
 "Gimme a loaf."
 "But you said your mother desired stale bread."
 "Yep."
 "This isn't stale."
 "Mom's run across th' street to talk with th' neighbors 'bout th' goings on at Mrs. Blinker's last night, and it'll be stale by the time she gets back."—N. Y. Weekly.

Easy to Avoid It.
 "I don't see what there is so objectionable about the custom of giving tips," said the mean man. "So long as it is the practice to give the tip only after the service is performed a waiter never knows what to expect, and one can get along very comfortably and very cheaply by merely changing restaurants every day."—Chicago Post.

First Spring Campaign.
 Mrs. Modus—Well, George, you promised me a new bonnet.
 George—I? Promised you a new bonnet? Great Scott! When?

Sole and Heel.
 They were reading the old man's will.
 "You are the sole heir," said the attorney, addressing the daughter. The local wit chuckled and said:
 "Who got the heel?"
 "I did," spoke up Perry Rosette.
 "I used to call on the daughter."—Chicago Daily News.

Up in the Air.
 "What sort of a fellow is Sweldup?"
 "Well, he's one of those fellows that you can never convince that there's plenty of room at the top!"
 "Pessimistic, eh?"
 "Not at all, but he thinks he's there already, and that he occupies all the space."—Philadelphia Press.

Nothing of the Kind.
 "Why, that's a genuine Raphael!" said the caller, surprised and delighted.
 "Not at all," replied Mrs. Gaswell, with cold distinctness. "My husband never engages in raffles. He bought that picture in the regular way and paid cash for it!"—Chicago Tribune.

What He Wanted.
 Pete Jackson—I hadn't had no work for six months, pahson, and—
 Parson Johnson—But I don't need yo'r services.
 Pete Jackson—No; but I needs youahs! I've finally decided to get married, and I wants to get youah best terms!—Puck.

 "What's his business?"
 "Well, I'm not quite sure, but I think he's either an athlete or a candidate for some office."
 "What makes you think that?"
 "I heard some one say that he ran exceptionally well."—Chicago Post.

Pelton on Oss.
 A million more he makes!
 His wife another snif in
 Her creosote bar, and in
 Her creosote another grin.
 —Puck.

ONLY A LITTLE OFF.

Mr. Orotund—Yes, I'm an elocutionist, my dear.
 Little Gertrude—Does it hurt people much when you kill them?
 Mr. Orotund—Kill them? Why, what do you mean?
 Little Gertrude—Why, I thought that elocution meant killing folks.—Chicago Daily News.

Ideal Compactness.
 The Brunette—He said his love was compact.
 The Brunette—Look out, dear; he probably wants you to live in a flat.—Chicago Daily News.

Plausible Explanation.
 Yeast—Why do they call a barber an artist?
 Crimsonbeak—I suppose because he makes a lot of money with his brush.—Yonkers Statesman.

The Real Thing.
 "Do you think her hair is all real?"
 "Why, of course. A girl with her means would never buy any other kind."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

From the City.
 "Did Dorothy do anything verdant out in the country?"
 "Yes; she asked the farmer if he kept a cow."—Detroit Free Press.

World's Smallest Monarch.
 Probably the smallest monarch in the world reigns over the Hindu vassal state of Bhopal, and governs a people of more than a million souls. This dwarf is a woman, Dihan-Begum by name, but although she is about 50 years old, she does not appear larger than a child of ten.

Cannon Balls for Paving.
 A private letter from China says that the soldiers at Tientsin are using the cannon balls in the arsenal to pave the roads. They have found an enormous quantity of iron shot and shell of different sizes, which some ingenious Yankee suggested would be a good substitute for paving stones.

COME TO EAT.
That Is Why Certain Strangers Seem to Visit New York—Shellfish Favored.

The amount of eating done in New York city only pales in significance beside the fact that most of it is done by persons from out of town, says a writer in the Sun, of that city. All spring, autumn and winter long—and for a large part of the winter, indeed—the town is crowded with strangers, who, if their patronage of the hotels and restaurants be any gauge, have come here largely to eat. A favorite trick is to "put up" at some inexpensive lodging place and go out for all meals at places anything but inexpensive. In any case, the expenditure is in the same direction—food. Some of these visitors spend more in New York during their annual week or fortnight than they do at home in a year—and all, mainly, upon things to eat.
 You can usually spot the westerner or inlander in any restaurant by the amount of shellfish he orders. Oysters, clams, lobsters—he eats them all as if he hadn't had a chance to taste any of them since his last visit to New York, which is probably true. A St. Louis girl here not long ago confessed to having had lobster for breakfast, luncheon, dinner and supper after the play during the entire three weeks of her stay.
 "Somehow the oysters in New York don't taste one bit as they do at home," complained a Louisville girl, adding that, though Louisville was pretty nice in most things, she must say New York was ahead on oysters. Of all the vast sums expended in eating by strangers in New York, we may be sure that more than half of it goes in shellfish.

REINDEER DOING WELL.
 Uncle Sam Has Large Herds of These Animals Up Amid the Snows of Alaska.

Far away, amid the snows of Alaska, Uncle Sam owns a reindeer farm. It has been conducted on unostentatious lines and very few people have heard anything about it, yet it has accomplished a tremendous work. In a certain sense it has been the salvation of the native Alaskan and has been the direct means of saving the lives of probably 100 American miners. The reindeer, says Sports Afeld, has proved an invaluable substitute for the horse, cow, sheep and goat. It can do more work for its size than any other animal in the world. To all the Alaskan the reindeer is their "hall in all." It is at once their servant, their meat, clothes and shelter. The first shipment of reindeer to Alaska consisted of 16 head and was made in 1892. To-day there are about 3,000 head and they are widely distributed over the country.
 There are now reindeer stations at the following places: Point Barrow (the northernmost point in Alaska, on the Arctic ocean), Point Hope, Cape Prince of Wales, Teller Reindeer station, Point Rodney, Golovin bay, Eaton and Tanana. The animals are very hardy and require little care; their food is of the simplest—consisting mainly of what is known as reindeer moss, which grows in abundance all over Alaska. They are very prolific, and at each station many reindeer are born every year. The fawns are very gentle and make excellent pets. To Alaska and her people the reindeer is far more precious than her gold.

A PHILADELPHIA DINNER.
 The Quaker City Isn't at All Slow When It Comes to Good Eating.

The first course was designed as an appetizer and was certainly a surprise, says the Philadelphia Press. It was concocted from spun candy nests with a fruit salad inside. The cut up cherries, oranges, pineapples and bananas had been soaked in rum. Well, it was delicious. Next came half-hot cutlets with cream sauce, and with them were served the daintiest cucumber baskets. They were made from the half of a large cucumber, the dark green rind turned back and cut into the form of leaves which inclosed the light green basket. The inside was scooped out and thin slices of cucumber with French dressing put in. A handle had been left at the top. Large French artichokes with butter sauce were next placed before the guests, and then came capon, potato balls and fresh green peas. The salad course was a sight for eyes as well as palate. The bright red tomatoes were surrounded by green leaves made from peppers. The inside of the tomatoes contained celery salad, which was covered by a layer of mayonnaise dressing. Several lettuce leaves on each of which was a little of the same dressing garnished the plate. Stewed terrapin followed the salad, and then was served bonne glace with chestnut sauce, in which were many of the familiar confections manufactured from that nut.

EDUCATION ABROAD.
 In the year ending March, 1900, the number of boys and girls educated free in Berlin was 207,510.

Among the 2,754 students at the University of Edinburgh last year there were 292 women and 168 students were from India.
 The schools of Vienna are to have medical attention. There the board of education is considering the appointment of a staff of medical school inspectors. It is proposed that the duties of these officials shall include periodical inspections of the schools, which shall be more frequent during contagious epidemics.
 Prof. Lyle, of the University of Melbourne, urges that a professor of military science in that university should be appointed and that instruction should be made compulsory on all male students who are British subjects and not physically unfit. In this way, he says, all the advantages of a military college in Melbourne would be gained at a small expense.

SOME GEORGIA NUGGETS.
 Trouble gives lessons, but we forget about them in a holiday with joy. It's a long lane that has no turning; but sometimes it turns mighty sudden! We look so far away for happiness it is often hard to get back home and find it.
 It always takes a little of the worst to teach a man how to hope for the best.
 Folks who say that this world is not bright enough are in no great hurry to see the next one blaze.
 You must take the world as you find it; but some folks are so blind they never find it at all.—Atlanta Constitution.

PERTAINING TO WISCONSIN.

Wisconsin leads all states in the per capita industry.
 It costs about $450,000 a year to maintain the poor in Wisconsin.
 About 16,000 marriages occur annually in Wisconsin, 30,000 births and 22,000 deaths.
 There are 19 colleges, academies and seminaries in Wisconsin, having a total attendance of 3,005.
 Wisconsin ranks second in the list of cheese producing states, coming second to New York.
 In the 358 banks of all kinds in Wisconsin the resources on December 13, 1900, were $27,583,316.72.
 There are 7,242 school buildings in Wisconsin, with a seating capacity of 524,192. There were in these buildings 2,403 male and 10,093 female teachers employed.
 Oramus Cole, who was elected to congress from the Second district in 1848, and Daniel Wells, Jr., who was elected in the First district in 1850, are both alive and residents of Milwaukee.
 When Wisconsin was admitted as a state in 1848 the new state was allowed two members of congress. In 1849 the number was increased to three, in 1861 to six, in 1871 to eight, in 1881 to nine, in 1891 to ten and in 1901 to 11.
 The total number of persons employed annually in the woods of Wisconsin is about 13,000, and the monthly wages vary from $105 to $24. Of this number 2,300 men are employed at log driving and are paid wages which vary from $1.40 to $3 a day.

FOREIGN FACTS OF INTEREST.

In the year 1899 the number of boys born in France was 432,330, of girls, 415,291.
 Berlin is to have a school for coachmen, in which drivers are to be taught how to get along in the crowded city streets.
 Norwegian legislators propose that girls who do not know how to knit, sew, wash and cook shall be refused permission to marry. Daughters of wealthy men are not to be excepted.
 According to the recent census there are in the whole of the German empire 27,374 physicians. The city of Berlin has 2,360, followed next by Hamburg, Breslau, Munich, Cologne and Frankfurt.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Before the discovery of sugar, drinks were sweetened with honey.
 Within two years, says the Saturday Evening Post, the cost of our navy has more than doubled. Uncle Sam still paddles his own canoe, but in these days paddles are expensive.
 Greenastle (Ind.) women who invaded a saloon and began to sing hymns were routed by the production of the section of the law which forbids music in saloons.
 A man in western Kansas keeps ten others at work digging snake root and rosinwood from the prairies for the drug trade. In the past 18 months he has shipped 35,000 pounds, some of it to Europe.
 Municipal and county debts have been increasing in the United States so rapidly of recent years as to furnish a theme for the moralizing of reformers. State debts, on the other hand, through the skillful management of those in charge of the financial arrangements of the various states, have been either decreased or entirely extinguished.

RICHMOND, VA.

Dear Sirs:—About a year ago, having arranged to go on a hunting trip, I found myself unable to raise my arm, having an attack of rheumatism. I went into your store and asked if you could help me out, as I did not want to be disappointed. You sent me a bottle of your "Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment" which I used freely, rubbing vigorously with it that night, and I was most agreeably surprised, when getting up the next morning, to find the rheumatism entirely cured and my arm perfectly well. I am glad to say I have had no return of the rheumatism since.

I told this story to a friend suffering the same way, and he tried your "Dixie Nerve and Bone Liniment" and was as speedily cured.
 Very truly,

Rock-a-Bye Baby

These are sweet words, but how much pain and suffering they used to mean. It's different now. Since Mother's Friend has become known expectant mothers have been spared much of the anguish of childbirth. Mother's Friend is a liniment to be applied externally. It is rubbed thoroughly into the muscles of the abdomen. It gives elasticity and strength, and when the final great strain comes they respond quickly and easily without pain. Mother's Friend is never taken internally. Internal remedies at this time do more harm than good. If a woman is supplied with this splendid liniment she need never fear rising or swelling breasts, morning sickness, or any of the discomforts which usually accompany pregnancy.

 The proprietor of a large hotel in Tampa, Fla., writes: "My wife had an awful time with her first child. During her second pregnancy, Mother's Friend was used and the baby was born easily before the doctor arrived. It's certainly great."
