The protracted drought has been broken throughout Vermont and New England. There is still a fighting chance for farmers.—Rutland News.

Our prohibition friend ought to know if the drought is broken, but we are constrained to remark that it is still on in this vicinity.

A negro hanged, burned and quartered is the latest story of the fiendishness which possesses men at times. No, it did not happen in the South, but in one of the most progressive states of the North, Illinois. If the deeds of fellow men, and of fellow countrymen at that, justify the commission of such acts, then the Southerners are justified. Fortunately, however, there is no justification in that condition.

In the light of the good results that have followed the work of the state railroad commission this year, the Northfield News advances the opinion that "the next general assembly may venture to confer a little more authority to the commission." If the public in general has anything to say about the matter, additional power, and a good strong measure of it, will be conferred on the board. In its reorganized and rehabilitated condition the present board has done well, but it might do much better were it clothed with more power and authority. For instance, the results of its recommendations in connection with the Bellows Falls depot, while not all that the people of that town desired, marked a considerable advance. And what is more important still it seems that the railroads interested will take steps to follow out the recommendations made by the board. Now that the people of the state know what it is possible to make out of the railroad commission there will be a still stronger demand on the next legislature that the powers of the board be increased. And the demand will be perfectly justified.

A considerable misunderstanding has arisen in Boston over what condition a man must be in to warrant arrest for intoxication. The confusion has started since Chairman Emmons of the police board of that city came into office. Chairman Emmons gave orders to the police department that all men should be arrested who gave evidence of being intoxicated by staggering, etc. Some members of the police force have declared that a man should not be arrested until he is making himself obnoxious to women and others passing along the streets. It would seem that Judge Emmons' position was right. There is hardly a better sign that a man is intoxicated than to see him staggering along the street. And if a man who lurches this way and that, lunges forward or nearly falls over backward and possibly plunges head first on his face—that is a definition of staggering—does not make himself obnoxious to women and to other pedestrians, it is difficult to conceive of what obnoxiousness consists. The Boston police who oppose Chairman Emmons in his view have little basis for their position.

The President's Invoice.
 "Let me see," says Ted
 As he scratched his head;
 "These headed noocastins
 Were given to me
 By the Chief Sore Kneec.
 That picture of the twins
 I believe I got
 From a Kansas lot.
 The bagger, eating there,
 From the same state came.
 I forget the name,
 And hang me if I care,
 Those blankets and pots
 With the grubby spots
 Are from New Mexico.
 I may not be glad,
 But I'm far from sad.
 It's not a state, you know,
 And the golden keys—
 Such a wealth of those—
 Are from the Golden State,
 Where they grow big trees
 And some LL D's,
 Out near the Golden Gate.
 But the other truck
 That has run amuck
 And landed in my car
 I'd like mighty well
 If any could tell
 Me whence and what they are—
 Some bottles of hair
 And many a pair
 Of buckskin trousers;
 There are pipes of peace
 (May their tribe increase);
 A million souvenir spoons;
 There are bowie knives
 That have taken lives,
 Elk antlers by the score,
 With the deerskin suits
 And the riding boots
 And belts a hundred more.
 Oh, what shall I do
 With the things, say you?
 And where shall I unload?
 Though I need them not,
 Yet with each a lot
 Of warm affection flowed
 From a loyal heart;
 'Twere the Inger's part
 Such gifts to scorn or scold;
 So right where we are
 We will stop the car
 And gently dump them off."
 —W. B. Gilliam in Baltimore American.

We wish to thank the ladies of Barre and vicinity for their liberal patronage during our special sale Friday and Saturday.

We defy any house on earth to undersell us.

We have added 250 more pieces—CORSET COVERS, SKIRTS, NIGHT ROBES, DRAWERS, CHEMISE, Etc.—and will continue this sale MONDAY and TUESDAY, that is if the goods are not all sold. Remember you buy them at absolutely what other merchants have to pay.

The Style of a "Dorothy Dodd"

Let us assume that your Shoes fit you. Now what next? What is most important? Unquestionably style. Demand that a Shoe shall possess style. If it has style and little else, you want it. If it has not style, but everything else, you don't want it. The Style of a "Dorothy Dodd" is unique. It cannot be duplicated by any other maker, because the "Dorothy Dodd" is a totally different construction from any other ladies' Shoe made. It holds the foot firmly at the waist—that's the instep—and prevents the toes from slipping forward, thus giving a correct poise in walking. Yet it makes the foot look nearly a whole size smaller. That's curious, and you won't believe it till you see it. Just for once try the Style of a "Dorothy Dodd." Sincerely yours,
