

HOMER FITTS

Another Wide Awake Proposition On Ladies' Suits and Coats!

We have been saying a great deal about Ladies' Suit Bargains lately, and now we are going to say a little more. We realize that our advertising represents too much for us to use meaningless words or offerings. The age of miracles is past. The people today want living, palpable facts. Behind each bargain offered by us exists a fact. To appreciate them you must examine the goods.

Common Sense.

We might say that the learning and knowledge of the present time that produces locomotives, steamboats and other useful and labor-saving inventions, is only the common sense of ages saved up. This same common sense is what is making and has made for Colonial Paint the reputation it has today. The chemists at the factory have scientifically compounded lead, oil and zinc in such a way that the paint produced outwears, outcolors and spreads over more surface than any paint now on the market. It wears longer than other paint—it is worth as much more as it wears longer. It looks better—it is worth as much more as it looks better than other paint. And if it covers more, it is worth as much more as it covers more. So common sense, the ruling element of today, directs you to buy Colonial Paint, as it outclasses all other paint, because it is the result of common sense, scientifically applied. Analysis of purity of material on each can. Sold by C. A. Heath in Barre.
