"Are you in pain, Boyle?" asked Courtenay, placing a gentle hand on his friend's forehead.

"Not much. More stiff than sore. It was a knockout blow of its kind. I can just recall you haulin' me out of the scrimmage and."

"It will be your turn to do as much for me next time. Try to go to sleep. We'll have you on deck tomorrow."

Courtenay noticed that there were only four other sufferers in the cabin. There were firemen injured by the explosion.
