TRIPPED IN COURT ON WORD MEANING

If Prospective Lawyer Had Owned Everybody's Cyclopedia, He Would Have Known.

A man was under examination recently by a New York lawyer with reference to his qualifications as a juror in an important case.

"Do you understand," the lawyer asked, "what is meant by the tower of Babel?"

"Yes, sir," the man replied, promptly. "Let me have your definition of it."

"I understand it, I tell you."

"Well, what is it?"

"I know what it is," said the man, hotly. "When I tell you I know what a thing is, I know it. That's all there is about it."

"I don't want to hear any more of that kind of talk," interrupted the court. "Answer that question addressed to you by counsel."

"Judge, I did," the man insisted. "He asked me if I knew what it was, and I said I did."

"If you are sure you know what is meant by the tower of Babel, define it," directed the court.

"The Times is distributing Everybody's Cyclopedia. With this set of books at hand, there can be no excuse for not knowing the meaning of terms commonly used. The set comprises 35,000 subjects of ready reference for daily use. At the same time there has been a wasted energy compiling page after page of practically useless material for the purpose of swelling the volumes so that they would seem bulky and important to the eyes of the ignorant. Every phrase and every word, every sentence and line not absolutely essential to the concrete and effective presentation of the facts has been eliminated and the explanation made strikingly clear by the addition of abundant illustrations.

Only one coupon is required, as explained under the cyclopedia coupon printed elsewhere in this issue.

COSTLY COLLARS.

They Cost $300 Apiece in the Days of Queen Elizabeth.

Starb was never heard of in England until after Queen Elizabeth came to the throne. This statement may sound a little startling, but it is quite true nevertheless. Elizabeth's father, bluff King Hal, was the first English monarch to wear any sort of neck-band. That was very plain, about an inch in depth, and made of lace. Yet only fifty years later an author of the times, Henry Peacham, writes:

"He is not a gentleman nor in the fashion whose band of Italian work standeth him not at least three to four pounds. Yes, a seamstress in Holborn told me that there are some of three-score pound price apiece!"

Fancy paying such a sum as $3,000 a dozen for one's collars!

The original of the present starched collar was the ruff. In the year 1564 Queen Elizabeth first used a coach. Her coachman came from Holland. He was a man named Boenen, and his wife brought with her from that country the art of clean starching.

Soon afterward a certain Mme. Dingben came from the Netherlands and started a laundry with clear starching in London. A very good thing she made of it for the daughters of wealthy citizens crowded to her to learn the art, and she charged them £5 apiece. Five pounds was a lot of money in those days—equal to at least $100 of modern money.—London Answers.
