Dr. Morton's Pardon.

In pardoning Dr. William J. Morton for misuse of the mails in connection with mining frauds, President Wilson expressly stated that he did so for the purpose of restoring the aged physician's right to practice his profession. Words of this import were actually written into the pardon. And yet the medical law of New York seemingly excludes one in Dr. Morton's position from this privilege. Governor Dix pardoned two such men, but it was held that his act in each case, while effecting a restoration to citizenship, did not carry with it the right to practice medicine, on which the statute is exceedingly rigid. Members of the medical society generally sympathize with the president's purpose, and are hopeful that a way can be found, even if the state law has to be amended, to permit the misguided Morton to resume the career for which he is best fitted. He has been a specialist in the medical use of static and other forms of electricity, and in the opinion of many observers might have contributed materially to the world's knowledge of this rather vaguely understood phase of therapeutics, had he adhered to scientific researches. In offering the aged man more than the law of his own state would allow, President Wilson overlooked a precaution some women in Iowa wrote to ask if at a coming church fair they might have a sort of lottery enterprise which they described. He answered—and this is found in his published papers—that if the state of Iowa had no law against what they planned, he certainly would interpose no objections.—Boston Herald.
