is full of rocks, and the top of the hill at the entrance to the village, and further along southward near the Roben place, which has become covered with depressions. Moreover, some work ought to be done on the same strip of highway south of the Smith stock farm to the Williamstown line, where the permanent work in Williamstown is started. When these jobs are completed, together with the permanent work contemplated in Barre and Williamstown, the highway will be fit to compare with the remainder of the route to White River Junction over which there is so much traffic during the summer months and especially during state fair week.

WITH BEAUFUL SETTING

'The Romancers' Was Presented in an Open-Air Performance. Favored by a most attractive natural setting, Rostand's 'The Romancers' was presented by the Frank Lee Short company under the auspices of the Barre Woman's club last evening, the lawn of Mrs. Isabella D. Smith of Elm street having been transformed into a theatre for the engagement. The fair-sized audience was much pleased with the excellent presentation of the play.

A most beautiful scene greeted the audience when three calcium lights were turned on the stage, while the moon cast its soft light upon the al fresco performance. The lawn had been curtained off by a large canvas, and the streets bordering were roped off to guard against the noises of vehicles. The story, containing many thrills, also pictures a sweet love tale in which the shattered dreams of two fair lovers are at last settled in a fitting climax. As Sylvette, Miss Kathryn Vincent, in her charming, yet simple manner, won the closest attentions and her acting was one of the worthy features of the performance. The role of Percein, the poet and nature-lover, was well portrayed by V. L. Granville. J. P. MacSweeney as Bergeman and Frank Howson as Pasquin, the two fathers, were all that the characters called for and they had little trouble in bringing out the humorous lines which run through the playlet. Mr. Short, himself an actor of ability, proved an interesting character as Strofoul. He it was who produced the fake abduction and who finally brought the fair maiden and her devoted lover together again. Miss Eva Quintard supported the part of the maid. From the onlookers' view point it was the most picturesque piece of stage work yet given to a local audience. The production was under the direction of Russell Janney, who is the general manager of the company. From here the company go to Woodstock, where they play under the auspices of the country club.

The first and second degrees will be conferred on a class of eight candidates at the next meeting, Aug. 18.

The Barre-All Stars, that aggregation of ball tossers comprising some of the best talent in the city, again met with defeat at East Barre late yesterday afternoon at the hands of the East Barre A. C. team that holds considerable prestige in Vermont baseball circles by virtue of its record this season. The All-Stars were defeated 5 to 3. They were captained and managed by Tommy Tomasi and contained the following players of the Italian and Barre teams: Tomasi, Scampini, Davidi, Sullivan, Fowle, N. Brown, J. Brown, Davidson. The pitching selection of Manager Tomasi and Mendez, the star twirler of the All-Star team of this city. Mendez pitched creditable ball but decidedly outclassed by Dannie Beaton, who has been the master of the Barre All-Stars this season in every game played. Beaton's pitching was very perplexing. He was assisted by Catcher Taplin. Fowle caught for the Barre nine. N. Brown contributed a three-bagger to the hitting features and J. Brown a two-bagger. The game was interrupted for many minutes in the eighth inning when the Barre team was disputing a decision rendered by the umpire. For a time it was thought the game would cease then and there.
