The Closed Market.

The increasing stringency in financial markets for the last few years, with the lowering quotations on standard securities, now appears exceedingly fortunate. If this world war had struck us at the high figures of 1906 the ensuing panic would have been incalculable. Brokers and bankers and moneyed institutions would have popped on every hand.

It remains to be seen how well we shall get through the trouble when our market reopens, as it some time must. The additional currency, liberated by the Aldrich-Vreeland act, as modified by recent amendments, should prove of great steadying force. And by the time the market opens the financial leaders will undoubtedly be in readiness to sustain it against any drastic bear raiding. With the volume of securities that will inevitably be unloaded on us by reason of European necessities, it is probably wise—merely as a business proposition—in a long war not to openly floating war loans here. We shall have about all we can do to finance our own institutions, and our own business, and buy back our own stocks.

How great the ultimate decline in listed values in this country will be depends on the length of the war and the exhaustion of the world's resources. From a short combat the world should soon recover, and particularly would the United States come back ready. But a long war would drag us in the mire of poverty. The world's capital is rather fluid commodity. The unloading of securities already allotted to differs not greatly from a foreign loan, since it releases money abroad for investment in home war bonds.

The world's wealth is thus like the water in a series of connecting lakes. It gravitates toward the spot of greatest depression, and no barriers which we can set up, like the president's wisely attempted interdiction of war loans, in the long run prevent money from going where the demand for it is greatest. The depletion of Europe's wealth will raise the demand for ours, and this raise will fall on ourselves, showing its effect in house rents and business enterprise of every sort. It will, for example, delay the electrification of American railroads 20 years, and of every other improvement which lies within the reach of 4 per cent money, but scampers out of the sight of that commanding 8 and 10 per cent.

We are probably in for a period of high interest rates, like that which followed the Civil war in America, with all the servitude which these lay on industry and trade. The country was then young and could stand it. The fertile fields of the West were just opening up for settlement. But today, apart from the post conditions, we are facing economic problems not unlike those of the older nations of the world. High rates of interest, like high taxation, will accentuate the burden.—Boston Herald.

Spillmen Rampant.

John A. Moon of Tennessee, the chairman of the House committee on the postoffice, which expends over $200,000,000 a year, has discovered a grievous situation. "Able-bodied men who have no earthly reason for being there under this administration"—to quote his exact words—are beneficiaries of the public bounty, and Moon wants it stopped. But what is the nature of this largest to able-bodied men? They are holding places, to which they had come by long training and experience, as assistant postmasters. If they were cripples or invalids and must be supported, Mr. Moon implies that he would not turn them out, but that able-bodied men should thus lie down on this administration for support, passes his understanding.

This is the old and nearly ineradicable spoils idea. A place under the government is a sinecure to be passed around among friends, and so long as this is the idea, the volume of work will be adjusted to that theory. The world's doctors, lawyers, builders, station agents, compositors for the work they do, regarding it as no offense that they should take the pay while still able-bodied. But under the government, it is so different!

Mr. Moon will doubtless vote to take over the telephone, telegraph, and express business by the federal government, thereby displacing a regime of fair pay for one of patronage. He evidently thinks our civilization could stand up under the strain. State Treasurer Mansfield announces with becoming solemnity that he shall never appoint a Republican where he can find a Democrat that will perform the required duties to Mr. Mansfield's satisfaction. If his own performance sets the standard, this ought to be easy.—Boston Herald.

The Bridegroom's Share of Expenses.
 In the "Home Problem" department of the September Woman's Home Companion a girl who is going to be married soon wants to know what the bridegroom's share of the wedding expenses are to be, who orders the carriage for the wedding party to drive to the church, and who selects the clergyman. The editor of the department responds as follows:

"The bridegroom pays for his own carriage to ride to the church and is accompanied in it by the best man. The same carriage is used for the bride and groom when they leave the church. The groom also provides the clergyman's carriage, pays for the license and the minister's fee, which is anywhere from five dollars to fifty. The groom sometimes provides flowers for the bridesmaids and maid of honor and always sends the bride her bouquet. It is customary for him to give his best man and the ushers presents, which usually take the form of scarf pins or cuff links. He also gives the bride as lovely a gift of jewelry as he can afford.

We, the members of the Washington County Deputy Sheriffs' association in meeting assembled, hereby express sympathy to our brother officer and president of our association, John F. Hastings, in the recent death of his wife, and regret that he is unavoidably absent from this meeting.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to our respected and worthy president and published in the county papers.

BETHEL

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wilson Outwitted by Friends on 25th Anniversary.
 Fully 50 of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wilson surprised them at their home Saturday evening notwithstanding the wet weather, to celebrate with them the 25th anniversary of their marriage. The original plan was to surprise them at Nestledown cottage, their summer home, but 24 hours of continuous rainfall convinced the promoters that the party must be at their village residence and by the use of proper strategy their presence at the proper place was secured. Music was furnished during the evening by members of the Italian orchestra, fruit punch, ice cream and cake were served, and a presentation of a purse was made with fitting remarks by Wallace Batchelder. Guy Wilson and Abbie Fisher were married at the Fisher home Aug. 29, 1889, by Rev. E. S. Fiske, now of Montpelier. Their whole married life has been spent in Bethel, where they fill a large place in the social and religious life of the community. It was a pleasant coincidence that their daughter, Gladys, and their son, Paul, were both graduated in this anniversary year, the one from Middlebury college and the other from Dartmouth college. They also have a younger son, Harold, who is still in the graded school.

Charles J. White is foreman of the carpenters on A. J. Robinson's contract to renovate the Methodist church at White River Junction. The men with him are Edward Holden and Daniel Abbott of this place, Bert Whitmore of Randolph, Kenneth Stimson and Leon Leet of Roxbury and Ben Steinberg of Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Paul Wilson and Robert Bundy, who lately went to the Canadian Northwest by way of Montreal and Winnipeg, write that they have employment in the province of Saskatchewan.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I beg to inform the public that I have decided to continue doing business in Barre and have succeeded in renewing my lease for the same store, located at 171 North Main street. I have just received a new stock of Men's and Boys' Clothing, Furnishings and Shoes for fall and winter, which I will place on sale at moderate prices.

I have always conducted an honest business and aim to give satisfaction and will continue with the same intentions.

I have in my employ experienced salesmen and in their behalf I extend a cordial invitation to the public to visit this store and inspect the merchandise.

I also extend thanks to the public for their past patronage and hope that you will again be among those who appreciate good values at sensible prices.

Yours for good merchandise,

Barre Clothing Store

MONTPELIER

L. M. Chandler, Middlesex Meat Man, Struck by Suburban Train.

L. M. Chandler, a Middlesex meat dealer, was struck by the suburban train on its way from Barre to this city, Saturday morning, and might have been killed had not the train slowed down for the grade crossing and, therefore, was going with little speed. Mr. Chandler was considerably bruised and his scalp was cut, but no bones were broken. He was taken to the Wells River station and his wounds attended by a physician, after which he was able to continue his journey. The meat cart was left on Barre street, in charge of Mrs. Chandler, while Mr. Chandler crossed the track to the Mills stonewall and it was while returning from there that he stepped onto the track in front of the train.

The new high school building is to be dedicated Tuesday, Sept. 8, the opening day of the fall term of school. An elaborate program is to be given in the evening, preceded by a reception in the afternoon. Speakers already promised for the occasion include Joseph A. DeBor, Principal E. S. Abbott, Raymond Colton and Mason S. Stone.

The September term of county court has been postponed one week because of the political conventions which come the week of Sept. 8. However, court will be formally opened by a judge on Sept. 8, according to law, and then will be adjourned at once.

The funeral of Armon Tavernia, the young man who was killed when he was thrown from his bicycle in making a sharp turn, was held yesterday from St. Augustine's church. Six schoolmates of the deceased acted as bearers. Burial was in the Catholic cemetery.

TO SAVE EYES

IS THE OBJECT OF THIS FREE PRESCRIPTION—TRY IT IF YOUR EYES GIVE YOU TROUBLE

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles, because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. At a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that everyone should use:

5 grains Opium (1 tablet)
 2 ounces water

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Op-ton system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.
