Professors Mario Landi and Basini, who conduct a music school at 48 South Main street, left this morning for a ten days' stay at their former home in New York. A freak potato grown on a small garden plot cultivated by James Ahern of Eastern avenue is exhibited at the Barre Drug store. The owner claims distinction for the tuber because of its odd shape and on account of the seven nodules which seem to grow out of the main potato, a tuber of normal size, if not somewhat larger than the average potato. The little knobs are so distributed over the surface of the potato as to lead to the appearance of an animal. The tuber is properly designated as an Irish potato and has attracted considerable attention.

In anticipation of the arrival of 400 delegates in Barre for the annual convention of the Vermont Sunday School association, a large number of local storekeepers have arranged window exhibits that will have a special appeal for the visitors. Through the effective cooperation of the local Sunday school committee, the storekeepers have entered heartily into the plan, and the result may be seen in many attractive window displays.

When the city fathers come together this evening for the regular fortnightly meeting of the council, they will receive a report from the aldermanic committee of the whole on the proposal to mend the sanitary conditions along the river bed in the granite belt. Recently the committee and the mayor and the city health officer made a tour of inspection and came to the conclusion that much remains to be done in the way of abating certain nuisances. It is intimated that the aldermanic report will contain a number of drastic recommendations and that failure to comply with these recommendations will be followed by summary action. A committee from the Central Labor union of Barre refreshed the memory of the councilors a few weeks ago, when they reminded them of a discarded plan for eradicating evils said to exist along the river banks.

An interesting comparison between the first incandescent electric light as put in the market by Thomas A. Edison 30 years ago and the tungsten lamp which is put to such a wide commercial use to-day is being exhibited in the Main street window at the office of the Consolidated Lighting Co. As stated intervals one may see the light shod by the first incandescent and the broad rays cast by the newer type. The display is attractively arranged and has arrested the attention of numerous passersby. A photograph of the "wizard of Menlo Park" is shown in connection with the exhibit.

Thomas R. Dooley, an old-time stonemason, who has been renewing acquaintances in Barre for the past ten days, left this noon for Concord, N. H., where he plans to visit relatives for a few weeks. By many of the older men associated with the granite industry in Barre, Mr. Dooley will be well remembered. Recently he has been making a stay in Hardwick, but not long ago he sustained a fracture of the right arm in an accident and was confined for several weeks in the Massachusetts General hospital in Boston. Afterward he received treatment at the Fanny Allen hospital in Winooski. He plans to renew his health completely before resuming work. Mr. Dooley was a well-known figure in Barre in the days when Barre granite had yet to see its fame encircle the globe. His stay here has been given over mostly to greeting the acquaintances which he formed many years ago.

The ladies' aid society of St. Monica's church will hold a public whist party in the K. of C. hall, Seapoint block, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 21, at 8 o'clock. Prizes given. Public cordially invited.

Mrs. Breene was born in Ireland 88 years ago, and has lived for 70 years in Vermont, about 45 of that time in Waterbury. The death of Mrs. Breene's son, Nicholas, not long ago, was a great blow to the aged mother. She is survived by three children, James Breene of Duxbury, Mrs. Mary Crosssett and Mrs. Barney McManis of Waterbury; also 14 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. One brother, James Casey of Underhill, survives.

Dr. Bailey's Plaintive Query.

In the Country Magazine and Suburban Life for October, J. Horace McFarland writes of Dr. L. H. Bailey, former director of the College of Agriculture at Cornell:

It is as a man that we who have printed for him for many years admire Professor Bailey. Hard stints he puts up to us, but we hit the pace with a smile, because of the man Bailey. He will send "copy" written on any scrap that comes handy, from the back of a wedding invitation to a receipted tailor's bill; he will draw a world-map in detail on the proof-sheets; he will tear up pages of "make-up" to get in place the last word of scientific accuracy; but all the printing folks just grin and go to it, because of Bailey the man, whose humanity is always the largest, mark on any piece of paper he handles.

When we were doing the first big cyclopedia for him, there came in a wobbly sort of an illustration of a tree-fern, to occupy the top and run down between the columns of a page. The foreman, disliking the untidy effect of the crooked stem, squeezed it a little here and there, in the interest of neat typography, and sent the proof to the "Proof," without comment. It came back "O.K." but with this plaintive query written on the margin: "If you pull a dog's hind leg straight, is it a dog's hind leg any more?" The shop grinned for more than a year over that!

Vermont Schools Exposition.

The agricultural and industrial exposition for boys and girls, which is to be held in Windsor, the latter part of the month, is the first exposition of its kind to be held in the New England states.

Vermont has been slow to introduce into her schools, the arts and crafts which the pupils of many other states have enjoyed for years, but we are gradually coming to a realization of what other states are doing for the boys and girls, and this exposition in Windsor is the outcome of the movement, begun only a few years ago, to broaden the work and strengthen the minds and activities of our young men and women.

The exposition, which is to be devoted entirely to the work done by boys and girls, is sure to give an added impetus to the movement for vocational work and training in the public schools of Vermont.

Every high school in the state ought to be represented in this exposition, in some kind of work done in each particular school.

It may not be possible to introduce into every school a full domestic science course or a manual training course, but we believe it is possible and not only that, but every school should be equipped with the ordinary requirements for such training, and before many years pass we will see its accomplishment, for the need of development is rapidly growing in the state. Vermont has seen from her borders on many more who have become famous in the history of the nation, than she ought to take her place among the other states in matters of education.—Northfield News.

How Tremendously an Ordinary Man May Develop.

In the October American Magazine Ida M. Tarbell writes the introduction to a new series of articles which she is to begin in that periodical next month. The new series is entitled "The Golden Rule in Business—How It Pays in Dollars and Cents, Personal Satisfaction and Human Happiness." In her introduction Miss Tarbell makes references to the new methods of scientific management which have been applied in the factories throughout the United States and then goes on in part as follows:

"The new management employs not only science but humanity, and by humanity I do not mean sympathy but rather a larger thing, the recognition that all men, regardless of race, origin or experience, have powers for greater things than has been believed. I doubt, indeed, if there has been any economic and social gain in the last 50 years which equals this growing conviction in industry of the powers of the common man. One has it forced upon him wherever he goes. Take any one of the great corporations of the day,—who officers and operates them? Men who once were laborers, mechanics, clerks! If they were not, then their fathers were."

In one plant alone of the Illinois Steel Co., that at Joliet, Ill., 178 of the men in responsible positions came up from the ranks; and the general superintendent started 28 years ago as a "marker." This is noticeably true throughout the steel corporation.

"His 'big men' have come from the ranks. The president of the Frick Coke & Coal Co., with 18,000 men under him, once handled a pick in a mine. I have had $25,000 and $500,000 men in mills and factories point out with pride the task at which they began at $1.50 or $2 a day. All over the country this is true. Our biggest silversmiths' was started by a patient workman who pounded out his teaspoons and porringers and himself carried them to Boston to sell. Our greatest silk manufacturer was started by a farmer who caught the millinery tree fever which swept the country in the 30s and, failing to raise silkworms, stuck to his dream and began importing what he could not grow.

"One could readily fill this magazine with such stories. It has been so from the start. It is so to-day. The man who is making the biggest profits in any business in this country, making them without other privilege from the state or government than the tariff, which his competitors all enjoy, 12 years ago was earning $2.50 a day as a laborer."
