as an efficacious means of protection for them, inasmuch as it would serve as a warning to drivers of other vehicles who, under the present arrangements, have not the slightest means of knowing of the presence of such unlighted vehicles, unless they are drivers of automobiles, in which case the lights of the latter give a fairly early warning.

Capital Punishment.

The season for capital punishment discussion has again arrived. New York and New Hampshire are debating the question. New York's new warden at Sing Sing opposes capital punishment. So does a representative association in Massachusetts.

This 63d Congress was great if measured by the pages of the Congressional Record.

We should presume that a man named Irvin S. Cobb isn't planning a pleasure trip to Europe the coming summer.

Examination of the returns from town meetings in Vermont reveals the high cost of administration in the growing tax rates.

It is not probable that the Germans will let the shoving of a wedge into Turkey go on without some attempt to draw off the hammer. So look for some counter move.

Washington, D. C., could have held an inauguration on March 4, 1915, and not felt the nipping cold of winter.

We are informed that the delay in appointing the police force of Montpelier was not due to neglect, as one might have inferred from the published reports, but was premeditated.

The British merchantship that rammed and sank a German submarine deserves to have her broken prow set up in Westminster Abbey or the Tower of London, not necessarily for the accomplishment of the act but for the boldness of the move.

The lines of instruction laid down by the British admiralty, which instruction was considered somewhat idle by those not acquainted with the vulnerability of submarines.

Texas is likely to have trouble over the proposition to divide that state into two separate and distinct states of the union, as such a measure has been introduced into each branch of the state legislature and is now being debated.

A REFORM IN VERMONT DELAYED.

The vote of the legislature on Friday, which killed the bill requiring the equipping of road vehicles with lights at night, merely postpones, we believe, a reform which is bound to be demanded by the people when the road vehicles become more numerous on the highways of the country districts where there is no artificial method of lighting.

A MODEL COUNTRY SCHOOL

Is Being Conducted by Finnish Farmers in a Michigan Town.

One does not look for a modern school, with a city equipment, located in the primeval woods, surrounded with a sparse and backward rural population that does not even speak the language of the country.

Life and industry in Portage township are varied. At the northern end is Houghton, an important shipping point by lake and railroad. Back of Houghton are the mining locations, among these is the farming district. The township school system has 13 schools, including a well-equipped city high school at one end of the scale and the Otter Lake agricultural school at the other.

The Otter Lake agricultural school stands at the corner of a wooded school-ground 40 acres in extent. It is an eight-room, two-story structure, not counting small rooms and basement. It is equipped with electric lights, gas, water under pressure, plumbing, and hot-water heating, precisely as in a city school.

breeding animals, for the school seeks to be the agency whereby better grades of live stock are introduced into this community. So it is also with the crops. Four acres of the 40 belonging to the school have been cleared, and most of this has been devoted to the raising of cereals and vegetables of a variety superior to that found in the neighborhood. So far as practicable, the work outdoors is done by the pupils, boys and girls alike.

The school stands ready to do anything that promises the regeneration of the community, economically, socially, and intellectually, and will not allow precedent or convention to interfere with the attainment of this object. It is to work not only for the children, but for all resident within the area of 50 square miles. It is therefore a community center, and once a month the parents assemble to discuss problems in which they are interested and to listen to talks by Finnish-speaking or English-speaking persons capable of instructing them.

In the equipment of the school, the Finnish farmer can see some things which he himself can have if he will. He sees the four horsepower oil engine running a small dynamo that lights the whole building electrically and at the same time pumps water and air into a large pressure boiler for a modern water system throughout the building.

Under the laws of Michigan, they must continue to attend until the age of 16. In addition to the regular course pre-arranged by the state department of public instruction, embracing the usual literary subjects, each pupil spends one hour a day studying either agriculture or domestic science by the laboratory method.

What Ignorance! The new pupil teacher had arrived at the school, and the budding geniuses and others were doing their best to form an accurate estimate of her abilities, temper and general character. The first lesson was to be one in natural history, and the teacher had chosen the interesting but complex subject of the cat.

"Now, children," she said, "tell me what sort of clothes pussy wears." No reply.

"Come, come!" said the new teacher, determined to extract the right answer by naming everything that pussy didn't wear. "Does she wear feathers?"

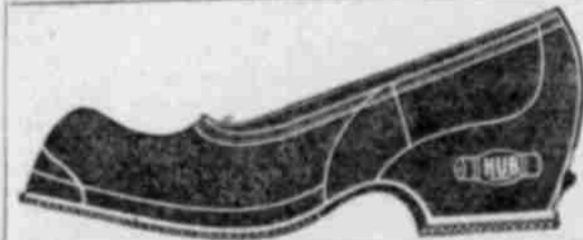

A pained expression crossed the face of a little boy in the front row. "Please, miss," he asked pitifully, "ain't you never seen a cat?"—Stray Stories.
