at Appomattox courthouse which indicated the end of the tremendous struggle which had plunged the nation into blood for such long years. To the people of that period the Civil war had been a terrible scourge, in which tens of thousands died in a fratricidal struggle, and it was a welcome relief to both the North and the South when the brave General Robert E. Lee surrendered to General Ulysses S. Grant at the courthouse in Virginia. The losses sustained in that war are not comparable with the casualties sustained in this greatest of all wars now taking place in Europe; but the Civil war was far more terrible in that people of one race, one national parentage, one common cause were locked in hostile embrace. Wars seem not so horrible when nations fight against nations, but when component parts of a single nation engage in slaughter for a period of four or five years the height of evil has been reached. Thus it was that the surrender of Lee, interpreted as the conclusion of the resistance of the Confederacy, was acclaimed with marked joy, with mingled relief in the northern states, and with relief if not with mingled joy in the southern states. The great bloody struggle was at an end, the people wearied with killing of fellow-patriots and ready to settle down to the pursuits of peace again. So April 9 is a tremendously important date in the history of this nation, the more so this year perhaps because the flight of time has marked an even half-century of peaceful relations between those former warring sections of the United States. Lee's surrender was the signal for lasting peace in the nation.

Those Connecticut deer are bothering the farmers again, chewing up the peach trees. Now, if you go out for a quiet walk in the woods with a gun over your shoulder the deer won't bother you at all.—New York Evening Sun.

Those Connecticut deer must have got into bad habits through association with Vermont deer. Up here the deer are so bold that they go right up to the farmers and eat rolls of hills out of their pockets. At least so we have been led to believe.

The United States is drawn into the history of the European war involuntarily through the act of the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich hurrying into anchorage at Newport News, followed a month later by her intervention. When the history of the war is written, this occurrence will furnish an interesting chapter as woven into the whole story. The part played by the United States in that occurrence was carried out according to sharply defined international regulations, from which this nation could not have deviated without violating that neutrality which it has been endeavoring to maintain.

A GREAT EVENT FOR UNITED STATES. Fifty years ago today the entire nation heaved a sigh of relief at the event.

POLICEMAN DREW REVOLVER To Frustrate Suspected Purpose of Three Men To Liberate Prisoner. Rutland, April 9.—E. R. Thomas and Charles Reynolds of this city and Edward Scanlon of Dorchester, Mass., all young men, were the subjects of some caustic remarks before the city court yesterday by State's Attorney C. V. Poulin, who told Judge F. G. Swinerton that the young men so conducted themselves Wednesday evening while Policeman Jesse Young was arresting William Wall, near the depot, that the officer had to draw his revolver and order the men away, thinking that their purpose was to take his prisoner away from him. The state's attorney remarked that he did not think that he had evidence sufficient to convict the young men but he wished to call the matter to the court's attention in order to insure the officers and the public that such interference would not be tolerated. Judge Swinerton explained to Thomas, Reynolds and Scanlon the serious nature of the offense and allowed them to go. They appeared in court without any warrants as a result of a promise made Mr. Poulin.

Mr. Poulin told the court that information had reached him that the three men went to a rooming house after Wall's arrest Wednesday and stated that they would have taken the man away from the officer had it not been for the gun.

Reynolds, Scanlon and Thomas denied that they committed any acts of violence. They declared that they were attracted to the scene by curiosity and that if he had asked if they would gladly have given Mr. Young assistance.

Who Will Claim Them? Letters unclaimed for at the Barre, Vermont postoffice for the week ending April 8, were: Men—J. Albasier, A. W. Bonnett, Chas. Clay (2), W. Casselin, Regine Forari, Connolly Giuseppe, Amos S. Jewett, Henry Laddler, George Murphy, A. N. Pratt, Jos. Pulli, Victor Paige, Giuseppe Quagliano, A. P. Roe (2), N. Riddell, P. Sassi, A. Serriffo, Ernest Tarney (2), A. L. Urte.

Women—Mrs. G. Canade, N. Jeanie Clapp, Miss Mary Holt, Miss Louise LaFleur, Mrs. H. Riddell, Mrs. Sadie Smith, Miss Lillian Weston, Mary F. Wilcox, Grace P. Wygant.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

At the Opera House Monday, April 12, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

The production of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" was prepared with infinite care, also the staging of Eugene Walter's dramatization of John Fox, Jr.'s widely read book. It is just as magnificent and gorgeous as can be made to please a discriminating public.

The play was appreciated in Boston, New York and Philadelphia, where long runs and the largest business of recent years marked its presentation.

In Mr. Walter's play, a sweet harmony of dramatic movement is secured, the scenery harmonizing with the mood of each scene following closely Mr. Walter's idea of stage representation. Their success was evidenced by the approbation of the public.

There is range and variety, graceful lightness, delicacy and fancy tenderness and sweetness, the charm of happy invention and the splendor of glorious creation.

It is a play that will please the most fastidious theatergoers and the role of June has lent to Mr. Fox's delightful creation a romantic touch that brings out all the hidden delightful characteristics of a girl who, all her young life, has revealed in the untamed atmosphere of a primitive mountain home. The cast has been carefully selected.—Adv.

Mirth Carmen Deplores Inflated Ideas of Personal Importance.

Miss Mirth Carmen, the brilliant prima donna of the Boston English Opera Co., who comes to the opera house with over 20 people Thursday evening, April 15, in "Il Trovatore," knows what it is to fight the battle of life and that this brilliant artist who has won her way to the top has never found the need to acquire a swelled head is, indeed, a lesson to many people in and out of the profession.

To all aspirants to big things in any branch of the theatrical profession, Miss Carmen says: "Do not get an inflated idea of your own importance; it is this unhappy condition in this precarious calling that pushes more people into oblivion than any other force," she declares. "From the moment the right foot rises to the first rung of the proverbial ladder, there are thousands literally on your heels, ready and alert to take advantage of every misstep. They are not necessarily directing their energies against the more fortunate leader, on the contrary, they are just ambitious and desire to forge ahead themselves. They are a mighty force and from the lowest to the highest do their might to build or destroy. Think of the many—and I am sorry to say that they are in the majority—that have dropped by the wayside only half successful, through utter disregard of the masses. When their combined energy could have been converted into a mighty engine to assist in the uphill fight, by a little consideration—a little appreciation of the fact that they are human beings, whether they are a beginner in the chorus or a star tenor. Their boasting is always essential—when the top is attained a steep slide looms up on the other side, and it only takes a slight push to start a down-hill journey, where the momentum is 10,000 times greater than the climb. To accomplish this it is not necessary to lose your dignity, or to make associates with every Tom, Dick or Harry—just make them feel that they cross your track—that they are too all real—make them feel that they are all your friends, and sooner or later you will feel the benefit, for they never forget."—Adv.

Amateurs Evoked Applause.

A large crowd witnessed an excellent series of pictures and the demonstrations of Peerless Pendleton in second sight as well as vaudeville of unusual merit last evening. The amateurs, who proved to be well known local celebrities, who have appeared several times in the past were well received and furnished good fun. The prize winners were the Barberi family, a duo consisting of brothers and sisters, in concert and piano, who were cheered so vociferously, as to leave no room for doubt but that they were entitled to first honors. The audience were the critics who held the fate of the perching peace in the nation.

formers in their hands. The cry of "get the book" was mercifully withheld. The winner of the second prize proved to be Tom Farrell of the seminary, who evidently, judging from his reception, was well known to the majority of the audience. His monologue, involving many well known residents, was warmly received. The balance of the performers were all that could be desired, and demonstrates that talent often is latent in many, waiting only the opportunity for exercising it.

To-night is what is termed the "Big Country Store" when hats, coats, shoes, stockings, and many articles of merchandise will be distributed, all free. Many of the articles are now on display in Lyons' window. On Monday, Mr. Pendleton predicted that the Prinz Eitel Friedrich would be interned, and the papers of yesterday verified him. He also called correctly the winner of the Willard Johnson fight. He now asserts that Italy will enter the war before the expiration of this month. He also adds that the granite strike would be settled on or before the last week in this month. It is to be hoped that he is right.

There will be an entire change of vaudeville and pictures to-night, in connection with the country store, and the first reel will be shown promptly at 6:45. All seats ten cents. None reserve.—Adv.

WASHINGTON.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank George Washington Lodge, No. 51, F. and A. M., Washington lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F., and the Washington Grange, No. 208, for the beautiful flowers; also all friends for the many letters and cards sent me during my sickness in Burlington.

WILLIAMSTOWN.

Word was received here the 8th, that C. N. Morse, who was taken to the hospital in Burlington the 5th, did not rally from the unconscious condition he was in the last day he was in town, and that his death occurred at the hospital late in the afternoon of the 7th. The funeral services are to be held at his former home in Bakersfield and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Downs and Miss Bernice Morse, have gone to that town and will not return until next week.

At the annual meeting of the home study club held with Mrs. Musette H. Seaver, April 8, the following officers were elected: President, Miss Mary E. Waterman; vice-president, Mrs. W. E. Randall; secretary, Mrs. Charles M. Seaver. It has been the custom of this club to hold no meetings during the summer months, but it was decided to hold a meeting each month this summer and a committee of arrangements, consisting of Miss Waterman, Mrs. Watson and Mrs. McAllister, was appointed.

Don E. Bemis is at his old place as clerk in Downs' store during the absence of Clyde Morse in Burlington and Bakersfield.

E. Clyde McAllister, temporary carrier on route No. 1, is sick and his place is filled by Carl W. Seaver, substitute on route 3.

The building known as Moulton's mill in the southeastern part of the town a little off the road to Chelsea, was totally destroyed by fire early in the morning of the 8th of April. Cause of fire is unknown. The fire was not discovered until it was well under way, and all the machinery was in the fire and is probably ruined.

Miss Connie Wilfore and Mrs. Chris Mikkelsen took the train yesterday at 5 p. m. for Burlington, where they are to go to the hospital for treatment and operation if necessary. Dr. A. A. Cross and Theodore Wilfore took the journey with them.

THIS WILL INTEREST STOMACH SUFFERERS

Says Indigestion Comes from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acid fluids and gases, which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash, or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescent, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys, and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salt is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.—Adv.
