The Big Surprise for Corn Owners—It's Sure, Simple, Safe, Quick

Listen to the wee story of "Gets-It," the world's greatest corn remedy. It's a short story,—only about two feet.—"Mary had a little 'Gets-It,' and corns upon her toe; and every time she put on 'Gets-It' the corn was sure to go." Mary, like thousands of others, used to be a heroine, suffering martyrdom, using painful bandages, irritating salves, sticky tape, toe-harnesses, blood-bringing razors and scissors! She says now there's no sense in it. Use "Gets-It," applied in two seconds. Easy, simple, new way—just painless common sense! Millions are doing it. Never fails. You can wear smaller shoes now. You don't have to limp around any more, or walk on the side of your shoes to try to get away from your corns! You know for sure before you use "Gets-It" that the corn or callous is going away. For corns, callouses, warts and bunions.

PURE WATER SUPPLY.

A successful artesian well has just been drilled for Mr. Frank B. Martin on top of the hill at his farm in Marshfield, near Plainfield, Vt. The well was completed at a depth of 52 feet, all of which was drilled in the solid ledge excepting 5ft. of top ground. Water stands within 7 ft. of top of ground, and when Mr. Martin lowers his supply pipe in the water will run without any pump into his buildings, giving him an abundant supply of pure, sparkling water. Mr. Martin says he is well pleased and will gladly recommend the Bay State Artesian Well Co., Inc. (of Warner and Woodsville, N. H.), to anyone in need of a good water supply. Mr. Martin says he feels he would be doing his neighbors a good service by telling them about the benefits that he knows that he is going to derive from this successful artesian well. He has been so bothered in the past by hauling water that now he can forget it and give his whole time in attending to other business.

The steam drilling machine will remain on Mr. Martin's farm for several days to give others interested in a better and never failing water supply a chance to contract for an artesian well. Lower rates can be given before the well-drilling outfit is freighted away. Address Bay State Artesian Well Co., Inc., at Warner, N. H., or Woodsville, N.H.—adv.

FARM DRAINAGE.

Factors to Consider in Deciding Upon a Plan of Land Drainage.

In planning a drainage system for the farm it is necessary to determine first whether open ditches or covered tile drains are to be constructed. Open ditches are generally used when large quantities of surface water are to be removed or where land and labor are cheap. The disadvantages of open ditches include the large amount of land they occupy, their interference with farming operations, and the high cost of keeping the ditches clean and the banks free from weeds. Tile drainage usually give more thorough drainage. They occupy no land surface and do not interfere with farming operations. If properly constructed they are practically permanent and require almost no expenditure for maintenance.

The farmer must decide the amount of money that he can invest for drainage. Usually it will be best to start with that part of the farm where the profits from drainage will be greatest and to extend the system as more funds are available. Often the first work must include a main or outlet for the whole farm and, therefore, will cost more per acre drained than future work. If the drainage system for the whole farm can be constructed at once the work can sometimes be done at a little less cost than if it is done a part at a time. However, the plan of doing a part at a time has the advantage of permitting the farmer to observe the results obtained and in the following work to make any improvement that may be expedient in the plan. It also permits the farmer to estimate closely whether it will be profitable to invest the money necessary for completing the drainage system.

On rolling lands where only occasional wet spots are to be drained the random system (fig. 1) is commonly used. On level lands needing artificial drainage a uniform system (fig. 2) must be planned that will provide drains for the entire area. The most economical arrangement of such a system is one which permits the use of long laterals and require the shortest total length of main drains. The advantage of this arrangement is shown graphically by figures 2 and 3, in which the systems drain equal areas.
