Battleships, transports, officers and men form the subject matter for a unique photo-scroll, attractively encased in a frame, which A. W. Badger & Co. are exhibiting in their south window. The picture was taken by a revolving camera in Montreal harbor some months ago when 31 snapshots, containing 32,000 officers and men, and accompanied by a fleet of 20 battleships, setting out for England, told eloquently of Canada's first response to the call to the colors. The event awakened enthusiasm and admiration throughout the British empire and England newspapers spoke of it as "unparalleled since William the Conqueror." The picture is the property of George Young.

A piece of "two by four" timber which Leslie E. Young, an employe of the People's Lighting, Heating & Power Co., had leaned toward two of his fellow workmen on the roof of a storage shed at the gas plant yesterday afternoon, fell short of its mark and was about to descend on the head of the man who leaned it, when he ducked with alacrity. In dodging the falling stick, he ran onto a trestle on the gas plant siding and caught his right leg between the ties. John Carrick and Joseph M. Nelson, who were on the roof of the storeroom, noticed their companion's predicament and went to his assistance.

A bad knee sprain was the most serious result of the mishap and Mr. Young spent the rest of the afternoon and to-day in bed at his home on Sumner street. He expects to return to work tomorrow or Monday.
