PILE OF NEWSPAPERS OF MUCH ASSISTANCE

Worked Under Wheels, They Help Motorist Out of Mud.

Method of Handling Difficult Situation So Simple and So Uniformly Successful That Every Driver Should Know of It.

From a motorist who lives in a section where mud roads are common comes a suggestion which its author guarantees as the best remedy for such a situation short of a pair of husky mules. He states that he has tried the method on numerous occasions, and that it has never failed to work. He says:

"I always have stored away somewhere in my car a stack of old newspapers. They don't take up so much room but I can always find a place for them. When I strike a mudhole and the wheels begin to fly around in that exasperating way which tells me that I am firmly and definitely stuck, I get out my bundle of papers.

"Taking a newspaper I fold it in half horizontally across the page and proceed to the task of working the paper between the tire and the mud. This is a simple matter, and is accomplished by feeding the paper while the wheels are being revolved. I feed the paper in lengthwise. Usually only a few will have been worked in when the tires will begin to grip and the car start forward. If a few won't do the work, keep on feeding in the papers until good traction is gained.

"This method of handling a difficult situation is so simple and so uniformly successful that every motorist should know it. If he is not equipped with some other apparatus for such a contingency, he should always have a little pile of newspapers stored away in some empty place in his car.

"In many localities it might be possible for a motorist to get old newspapers from neighboring houses; but when the mishap occurs in some lonely spot, lucky is the man who has some newspapers in his machine."

Trials All Have Value.

Trials without discover forces within. Says Victor Hugo: "There are instincts for all the crises of life." A deep perplexity awakens a flash of insight; a bitter opposition sets the soul on fire; a zealous peril opens out eyes to horses and chariot of fire; a severe catastrophe evokes a heroism of which the sufferer had not thought himself capable.—W. 15 GRADUATES FROM NEWPORT HIGH SCHOOL

Prof. C. H. Patterson Gives Instructive Address on "The Need of Ideals"

The First Congregational church was thronged Friday evening with relatives and friends of Newport High school and of the graduating class of 1920 to listen to the commencement exercises. The church was unadorned save only with palms on the platform, and clusters of ferns grouped along the choir rail. Bertrough's orchestra was in attendance and the program was interspersed with several selections.

The Divine blessing was invoked by Rev. H. T. Covert, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Historic Vermont by Evelyn Vignault was a very comprehensive resume of Vermont history from the time of the discovery of Lake Champlain, the settlement of Vermont, tracing ably the heroic part Vermont has played in all critical periods, her growth in population, and manufacture and the benefits of her natural scenery.

Dorothy Wood's essay, Reconstruction Work in France, taking the different problems and the efforts to meet them, "We who live among the Green Mountains of old Vermont, do not realize the great problem that have France is at present confronting, that of rehabilitating a war-racked country. The administrative department separated the difficulties of reconstruction into four responsible sections.

The first section deals with the condition of repatriation of the people scattered on the territory and the re-establishment of the schools. The second section takes care of all questions concerning the housing of the people and looks after the re-establishment of labor conditions.

The third section is preparing the ways and means of agriculture reconstruction by furnishing raw material, farm machinery, and means of transportation.

The front section has been divided into numerous committees corresponding to all the industries involved. On every hand, people see the thousand little endeavors that are being made to bring order out of chaos.

The essay on Poland by Joseph Sockol was a clear and concise history of Poland's great past, and of her gradual decline owing to the greed of quarrelsome neighbors, from the greatest power in Eastern Europe to the position she has today. "The fate of Poland is the fate of Europe," said Mr. Sockol, "no one in Poland wishes the role assigned to her by the allies by history and by her geographic situation. The Polish holding fast, they are 'carrying on', and the world watches them sympathetically, eagerly, hopefully.

Prof. Charles H. Patterson of the Department of English in the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst, delivered the evening's address. Hon. Frank Plumley had been advertised as the speaker, but was unable to be present.

Professor Patterson chose as his topic, "The Need of Ideals." He spoke of how nature showers with lavish hand and without distinction that which is for use and that which is merely beautiful.

"The last moment of civilization," Professor Patterson said, "was when some primitive ancestor not merely conquered for himself, but had the unselfish thought to give to another."

He said the machine produces merely the material but the man may produce that which allies itself to heaven and the best that we can dream. He pointed out how Prussia had an ideal of unselfishness and had produced no great leaders of liberty—no Cromwells, no Washingtons, no Lincolns.

"Ideals are essential to nations," Prof. Patterson declared. "Without them they pass to destruction. More-over these ideals must be expressed in affirmation and action. We shall not be proud of our failures to do our clear duty in the world. We live not in reputation, not even in material achievement alone, but above all in the Declaration of Independence, our Service Doctrine, our Emancipation of the slave.

"The individual also is under the same law."

Professor Patterson spoke of the great temptation just now to sell the chance of education, of life, for the possibility of immediate high wages but quoted the Bureau of Education in Washington to show that a boy of 25 the boy who stayed in school till he was 18 had earned $2,000 more than the boy who went to work at 14 and after the age of 25 the increase for the educated boy far exceeds that of the other which usually stands at that figure or near it.

He warned also against the tendency for graduates who find themselves becoming prosperous but forgetting their duty to return spiritual gifts to the community. He said the community had not taxed itself enough to prevent children from becoming paupers for to do that the community would not have needed high schools or would have erected merely trade schools. The community expects a nobler return.

"At this crisis in world affairs with all our pride in our nation and its ideals we stand before the world paralyzed or unable to produce anything uplifting and constructive." Prof. Patterson continued. "The need is to turn our ideals into acts. The world is dying for need of them. The individual thinks he counts but one, but the nation is not so many rocks or hills, it is man and man and man. We must float with the great impulse that has thrust us upward out of the past toward the best we can dream of. Shall we float as a derelict or

Stanstead Beats Newport High

Once more Newport High school won a ball game and then lost it, when they were defeated by Stanstead college in a poorly played game at Stanstead on Friday morning. The score was 13 to 5 in favor of the Canadians. Young Howard Allen pitched for Newport and twirled an excellent game up until the fifth inning, when he weakened. From then on the Stanstead batters continued to bug him, piling 13 hits for as many runs.

The ground was wet and it rained during a portion of the game, making it difficult to handle the ball. Sokal errored frequently, while Skinner had trouble holding the ball when it came near first base.

The score by innings:
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Stanstead 0 0 0 3 0 5 4 0—13
Newport 0 0 0 5 0 0 0 0—5

ONLY ONE STLYE IN THIS MILLINERY SHOP

There is a millinery shop in New York which guarantees its hats never to go out of style. With every purchase goes the understanding that in five or ten years from now the bonnet bought today will be just as attractive, just as much admired and even more in vogue.

It is the Salvation Army "Millinery Shop," located at 129 West Fourteenth Street, New York city, in which establishment every bonnet which enters the tenement houses, rescue homes, orphanages, nurseries or slum settlements first sees the light of day. And the shop does a rushing business. Three hundred bonnets each week are trimmed, boxed, sent out to all parts of the country and started on their mission of spreading cheer and hope to every corner of the United States.

And the Salvation Army is an importer—not the type that sticks the coveted word after its name as a matter of course, but a real one. Every bonnet that graces the head of every Salvation Army lassie came all the way from across the Atlantic for that purpose. The bonnet itself is English, the trimmings are American, and the wearers embrace every nationality in the world.

Many times each week big trucks draw up to the door of the shop and deposit their cargoes of untrimmed hats. At frequent intervals the pliant bonnets, with their long blue streamers, blue ribbing and satin folds, leave the establishment bound for years of service in the slums and bleak spots of the nation. The familiar blue bonnet—shaped like nothing else under the sun—is a symbol of unselfish service in nurseries, hospitals and tenements the whole world over.
