Vermont was right when it came to seconding the nomination of Coolidge for vice-president. It was a real pleasure.

Young men aspiring to the presidency will promptly move into Ohio. There's initial prestige is being located in a pivotal state like that.

Earle S. Kinsley's re-election as Republican national committeeman from Vermont is probably satisfactory to the majority of the Republicans of Vermont. He has done acceptably in the position.

One of the most marked effects in Chicago was the rapid decline in hotel costs immediately after the adjournment of the national convention. The newspaper reports show a depreciation of something like 500 per cent in the charges, while the delegates will fail to appreciate.

The word is being passed along that Wilson does not propose to run again for the presidency but that it took a long time for his advisers to overcome his obstinacy in the matter. If the latter is the case, it is evident that Wilson has been getting out of touch with the country since he was stricken ill, nine months ago.

That Senator Harding had little inkling of what was in the wind at Chicago late last week is indicated by the fact that a few minutes before midnight on Friday night he caused his name to be filed as a candidate for the United States Senate from Ohio, the time expiring that night. Or if he had any inkling of what was to be attempted in his behalf he did not place a full measure of reliance on the effort. He was playing it safe at any rate.

It has been more or less a matter of good fortune, or good luck, that other vehicles, either horse-drawn or motor-driven, have not been struck by Central Vermont trains at the Dodge crossing between Barre and Montpelier. For the driver of any kind of a vehicle, going from Montpelier toward Barre, it is almost impossible to see a train approaching from the direction of Barre until the crossing is reached. This is due to the sharp ascent in the road and an obscuring bank on the right side of the road. The accident Monday afternoon was just the sort that many people have feared might happen to persons not thoroughly familiar with the danger situation.

Official report to the U. S. war department concerning the inspection of the work done indicates that Norwich university is maintaining its military department in creditable shape, the institution being again classed among the 20 colleges of the "distinguished" class for general excellence of military instruction. It is one of the greatest glories that Norwich is able to keep up its military department, and no doubt President Plumley will endeavor to maintain all the traditions of the institutions in that respect. Incidentally, the honor which came to Norwich for this distinction is quite a credit to the state of Vermont. Vermonters hope to see the record maintained.

To be effective, any threatened bolt from the Republican party will have to be engineered by some other persons than Amos Pinchot or Senator LaFollette. We hesitate to place Mr. Pinchot in the same category as Senator LaFollette, for we are convinced that he is not of the same type of American; but the two were brought together in the same newspaper story as possible leaders of a defection from the Republican party, so they would naturally be considered in the same connection. Amos Pinchot has been well-meaning but not successful because, perhaps, of tactical blunders. Nobody expects LaFollette to lead much of a bolt because he already had taken himself pretty well out of the party.

It was Harry Daugherty, the campaign manager for Harding, who many weeks before the convention made the prediction that "at the proper time after the Republican national convention meets, some 15 men, bleary eyes with loss of sleep and perspiring profusely with the excessive heat, will sit down in seclusion around a big table and they will select the candidate who will then be nominated by the delegates in open convention." There may have been some slight deviations in the fulfillment of the prophecy, but the resemblance between the prophecy and the actualities was so remarkable as to arouse wonder. Mr. Daugherty has thereby demonstrated his capacity as a prophet and a campaign manager at one and the same time.

If Calvin Coolidge should be elected vice-president of the United States it would be the third time in the history of the nation that such an honor has fallen to a native of Vermont. The other two instances were when Chester A. Arthur and Levi Parsons Morton were elected. Both those men had left Vermont long before they were elevated to that high position, having cast their lots in New York state, while Coolidge remained in Vermont during the years up to his graduation from Amherst college. In the case of Chester A. Arthur, Vermont had the presidency of the United States unexpectedly thrust upon it through the death of James A. Garfield in 1881, Mr. Arthur taking the office in the regular order of succession. Being a small state, Vermont never has had the distinction of having one of its residents elected either president or vice-president.

A MAN WITH A STEADY PURPOSE.

With characteristic steadfastness of purpose, Gov. Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts resumed his job of administering the affairs of his present office as if there had been no national convention in Chicago and as if he had not been nominated for vice-president of the United States. He was determined to finish his job. That was much of the reason for Coolidge's success thus far in political and official life. He means to finish every job which he sets his hands to do. He is not a slacker in any sense of the word. He fixes his goal and he moves forward toward that goal without swerving and without being swayed by the lighter currents of air. If he is elected to the position of vice-president he will devote himself assiduously to the office of vice-president and will not allow any side issues to interfere with his work. The people of the country can bank on Coolidge because he is of the old-fashioned type of man who believes in giving one hundred per cent value for every dollar if that is humanly possible.

ORANGE COUNTY FARM BUREAU

Notes for Week Ending June 12.

Two of the corn variety test plots were visited this week. It is yet too early to state how well the seed is growing. With favorable weather good results are looked for.

The West Bradford and Wright's Mountain Farmers' clubs met at the homes of Fred Lang and Charles Pieron, respectively. At the Wright's mountain meeting the subject for discussion was spraying grain.

The plans for the annual meeting include a big day for farm bureau members on June 15. It is expected there will be a good-sized crowd in attendance.

The West Topsham creamery-community picnic is set for June 18. If the plans already made are carried out the picnic will be even more successful than the one held last year. There will be a fine program of speakers for both the afternoon and evening sessions. The speakers include V. R. Jones, who will score the cream, John Hitchcock, state dairy specialist, L. G. Mulholland, state marketing agent, and Dr. DeFossitt, who is in charge of the tuberculosis eradication work in the state. There will be a community dinner served at noon. Everyone is invited and a good time is assured.

Harold A. Dwinell, County Agri. Agent.
