Sister's new beau had hardly got seated on the parlor sofa when little brother brought him a glass of water and tendered it to him very politely. The young man drank it and returned the glass to the small boy, who looked disgruntled.

"He don't, either," she said to his sister.
"Don't wait dear."
"Why, he don't drink any different from any one else and pop said he drank like a fish."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

POLITICS AND THE HOUSEWIFE.

How World Questions Affect the Cost of Living.

"What have I to do with wars between Russia and Poland? Who are the Czechs-Slovaks, who is Teachen, and what does it matter to me what becomes of it?" Such are the questions rather impatiently asked by the average man, and perhaps still more the average woman. They think that politics, like charity, should begin at home, and when the discussion wanders off to foreign parts they feel justified in returning to the undisturbed contemplation of the news from Epsom or Old Trafford. What have they to do with bolsheviks? If they wish for a plain answer they cannot do better than study Mr. Gosling's speech to the transport workers at Southampton.

avenue into which our export trade might expand.

We are indirectly getting a lesson in the economics of protection, for imports from Germany and Russia are virtually cut off, and we see one of the results in the impossible prices which have nullified the increases of cash wages. Mr. Goslin very rightly draws the moral that the greatest possible freedom of trade is one of the conditions of increased productivity of labor. People complain that labor, while paid more, is producing less. They forget the handicap of shortage in the materials and implements of industry—a shortage which will not be remedied till we again enjoy the full use of Russian materials and German skilled workmanship. — Manchester Guardian.

After a Hard Winter.
"Do you believe in transmigration of souls?" asked the little man.
"Sure," replied the big man. "Why?"
"Nothing," answered the little man.
"But it says here that there are birds in Africa with bills a yard long."
"Well, what about them?" demanded the big man.
"It was just wondering if those birds are not the spirits of departed plumbers," replied the little man.—Cincinnati Enquirer.
