Trouble with the brakes developed and the driver lost control of the car, which swerved and the people on the seat were thrown against the windshield, forcing her head through the windshield. The accident occurred near Wallingford.

Myron Whitcomb, a 12-year-old Springfield, would have died by suffocation one day this week had not Frank Pulsipher noticed the actions of the youngster and rescued him. The boy jumped into the water tank of the street sweeper and amused himself by popping up and down to surprise people until the cover of the tank unexpectedly came down, the hapless child was pulled up and was fastened into the air-tight compartment. Pulsipher missed the boy, noticed that the lid was down and hastened to his rescue. The boy could have survived but a few minutes.

CONGRATULATIONS

FOREST DEPLETION; NEWSPRINT SHORTAGE. The United States is Compelled to Import Large Quantities of Pulpwood and Paper.

The fundamental cause for the present shortage of newsprint paper is the serious depletion of the forests of the northeastern and the lake states, where there is an overdevelopment of the pulp and paper industries, according to a report to the Senate by the forest service, United States department of agriculture, in response to a request for information on timber depletion, prices, exports and ownership. The report, which has recently been made public, is one of the most comprehensive ever prepared dealing with the lumber resources of the nation.

Since the requirements of paper making restrict the kinds of wood that can be advantageously used in making newsprint, four species—spruce, hemlock, balsam and poplar—supplied 84 per cent of the total amount manufactured in 1917, according to the report. The occurrence of these species chiefly in the lake states and New England has led to the over-centralization of the paper making industry there, it is stated.

Paying Penalty for Depletion. Until recently, when abnormal demands, short supplies and resulting high prices led to increased newsprint production through the utilization of plants designed for and formerly used in making other kinds of paper, there has been no expansion in the newsprint industry in the United States since 1909, and we have had to import large quantities of pulp wood and paper, the report points out. The demand, however, has greatly increased, and because of excessive depletion of our own resources this foreign now is dependent upon foreign sources for two-thirds of its newsprint or its raw material.

Even with the imports the supply has been far short of the needs of the newspapers of the country in the past two years. The contract price has increased more than 200 per cent while spot market prices are 500 per cent more than in 1915. "Prior to the war," says the report, "the larger newspapers secured all or practically all of their supplies under contract, and a relatively small percentage of the total newsprint consumption was handled on a spot market basis. During the last year the larger papers have found it increasingly difficult to secure all of their supplies under contract and have been forced to secure the remainder in the open market. It is in the open market that the full effect of competition for inadequate supplies is shown and this is reflected in the much higher prices.

Small Papers Suffer Most. "Unfortunately it is upon the spot market that the smaller newspapers, least able to increase returns by increasing advertising and raising their rates, must depend." The result has been that many of these small papers have been forced to curtail their issues and have had the greatest difficulty in securing enough newsprint to continue publication. It has been possible for the lumber industry to move to more remote timber lands as forests have been cut away, but the heavy investments required for paper plants have made it impossible for the paper industry to do this. The result is that existing mills are finding it necessary to secure their supplies of wood from increasing distances. Spruce from Minnesota and Canada, for example, is being hauled from 700 to 1,200 miles to paper mills in Wisconsin.

The timber is going fast, the report says. It is reported that in New York, where nearly 30 per cent of our newsprint is produced, 90 per cent of the pulp and paper mills have absolutely no timber supplies of their own. For these mills there seems to be no other prospect than to close down in a comparatively few years. In New Hampshire the coniferous pulp wood has been heavily cut and 10 or 12 years will see the end of the supply. Aside from the state preserve in New York, in which no cutting is allowed, the bulk of the coniferous pulp wood in the east is located in Maine. One company there has enough timber for 40 to 60 years' cut. Others are estimated to have enough to last 15 to 20 years, but there are about 15 companies which have no lands of their own and which will have difficulty in purchasing material within 10 years.

In general, the pulp and paper mills of the northwest are becoming more and more dependent upon Canadian wood. Such dependence, the report points out, is extremely dangerous. All exports of pulp wood are prohibited from Newfoundland. The Canadian provinces have prohibited the export of pulp wood from crown lands, which form a very considerable part of the timberlands in eastern and western Canada.

On the whole, the situation of the newsprint industry in eastern United States is very unfavorable and there is little chance of its becoming better, the report states. The only things that can assure production of even approximate domestic requirements are concerted effort to increase the production of pulp woods in the northeast and the development of the newsprint industry in the west and in Alaska.

Alaska Offers Relief. The timber on the Tongass national forest in Alaska is said by the report to be of particular importance in connection with the newsprint situation. It is estimated that there are about 70 billion board feet of Sitka spruce and western hemlock well suited for paper making. The timber is located in a comparatively narrow belt along 12,000 miles or more of coast line. Water power is available as is also deep water transportation from numerous mill sites.

"It is estimated that the cut from this region alone will insure a perpetual supply large enough to meet one-half of the present newsprint requirements of the United States. Alaska is one of the centers to which the newsprint industry of the United States should look for a large future development. The same is true of other centers in the west, where immense resources of pulp wood supply

BOY CUT BY CAR. Sedley M. Campbell, 9, of Bellows Falls, the Victim. Bellows Falls, July 26.—Sedley M. Campbell, 9, the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. The boy was riding on the back of a team and as he jumped off the team on Westminster street he stepped back in front of the car.
