PITTSBURGH CONCERT HEARD IN BARRE

Osman Dodge, Young Wireless Operator, Gets Test on Radiophone. A representative of The Times had the pleasure last evening of sitting in and listening to a graphophone concert and talk in far away Pittsburgh. Sounds something like an April 1 joke, doesn't it? But it's a fact. The Times man was led up into the attic of the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Dodge on Elm street and there introduced to a maze of wires and improvised equipment; was told by the young operator, Osman Dodge, to place some telephone receivers to his ears and, presently, the concert started. First a contralto voice was clearly heard, although the words were not distinguishable; then came the sing-song talk of a man delivering press dispatches; again a soprano voice, not so pleasing as the contralto and with words not any more distinguishable; and through it all the intermittent sputtering of the wireless calls from one station to another hundreds and hundreds of miles away. These calls, the young operator could decipher, but he could not read the messages being transmitted although catching a word or two now and then. Needless to say, perhaps, the concert and the talk in which the voice was clearly heard came by means of the radiophone. The receiving apparatus is the same for that as for wireless telegraphy but the sending apparatus has to be of a different type. The test was being made at Pittsburgh (East Pittsburgh, to be exact) as a demonstration of the radiophone. The night was about suited for the transmission of the songs and talk because the air was still and cool; and although the sender was perhaps 600 miles away the voices could be heard with remarkable distinctness, being literally picked out of the skies. This was not the first time that the young operator has listened in on musical programs at East Pittsburgh. The concerts are given nightly as a demonstration, and amateur operators, like the Barre young man, all over the eastern section of the country have been trying their hand at catching the demonstration. Another station in Washington, D. C., is doing the same thing, but the Barre operator has not as yet caught any of those programs, so far as he knows. He has been experimenting with wireless for several years and has gained considerable proficiency in the art. He plans to install a large amplifier in a short time which should enable him to catch the sounds from the radiophone much better and probably enable him to make out the words of the songs as well as to hear the whole of the speeches.

Springtime rehearsals are progressing splendidly and a great treat is in store for the Barre audience who will witness the performance next Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The leading roles are being successfully portrayed by the following talent: Elena Barberi, Mae Paul, Mercedes Bennett, Doris Burke, Blanche Tilden, Ralph Oliver, Eva Adie, Leone Reynolds, Margaret Roberts, George Stewart, John Booth, Max Fisher, Florence Trembley, Henrietta Lillie, Wayne Perry, George Douglas, Eleanor Lehoureau, John Boyce, Alice Naughton, Winona Lillie and Edward Hamel. The entire cast numbers 200 and exceptional talent is displayed in many choruses and dance numbers. Tickets may be secured from the cast, members of the Woman's club or at the box office beginning Monday, when seat reservations may also be made.—adv.
