Frank Greene's $9.15 bill of expense for being elected to the United States Senate doesn't stamp him as a $9.15 man by any means.

Already stretching into weeks, the million-dollar Woodhouse alienation suit in Chittenden county court looks like quite a bill of expense whatever the outcome.

Those who have grown wearied of predicting when something will be done in the Hall-Mills murder case may turn to a somewhat more definite thing, the weather.

Representative-elect Aaron H. Groat of Newport is out with an announcement of his candidacy for speaker of the Vermont House. Others may be expected to follow suit in a short time.

"It is up to you boys to take good care of your mother and sister. Good-bye," wrote a 50-year-old man of New Haven Mills just before he took a fatal dose of poison. It must be said that the three boys did not have a very good example of courageous devotion to the task when the head of the household deserted in such a manner.

The little town of Ira, in Rutland county, has done something which may be a larger town and some cities in Vermont have not done—it has just dedicated a memorial to its townsmen who died in the service of their country in three wars, including the World war. Having done so, Ira has a right to be incensed over the dilatoriness of the others.

Calling off of the shophmen's strike against the Central Vermont Railway Co. is attendant with an understanding that the strikers will be re-employed as the railroad needs them. The Central Vermont is enjoying a rush of business in common with other railroads in New England and it seems as if some of the ex-strikers could be employed now if ever. It is to be hoped that the adjustment of difficulties on this line may work out satisfactorily to all concerned.

Following the hearing of the case of William Masters of Monkton on the charge of pointing a deadly weapon at Charles Harriman of the same town, resulting in the weapon being discharged and Harriman being seriously injured, it developed that Masters has been in the habit of pointing firearms at persons for a "joke." In the case at hand the "joke" turned out to be near-tragedy as the revolver pointed at Harriman contained one shell. Sentence of eighteen months in the house of correction is likely to eliminate that kind of a joke from Masters' repertoire. It ought to be similarly effective in cases of other persons inclined to such foolishness.

There doesn't seem to be any chance for an argument this year over the high school football championship of Vermont; the title goes to Burlington high school, hands down, following that team's victory over Rutland high school after successive victories over the other strong contenders like St. Albans and Spaulding high of Barre. The Burlington team hasn't played all the possible aspirants for the honor because games were not scheduled with all of them, but with those it has played it has demonstrated its superiority in marked fashion. Thus it seems that there will be none of the wearisome claims and counter-claims on paper at the close of the season. It is for the other teams to begin making their plans to cope with Burlington high another year.

THE CRIME AT ORFORD, N. H. The double murder of the elderly Davis brothers in the little town of Orford in New Hampshire, just across the Connecticut river from Fairlee, was one of the most foul crimes ever perpetrated in this part of New England, the two victims having been apparently struck down in cold blood by a person or persons swayed by a passion for money, of which the brothers were known to carry a considerable store. Human life is no barrier for the lust for gold in the minds of some creatures masquerading for men; it is held no more sacred than the life of the most humble animal that crawls over the ground. Lust for gold caused an inoffensive and feeble man, John Hobart, to be murdered in the town of Middlesex only a few years ago. Lust for gold was back of the blows, which struck down an aged storekeeper in the little village of Gassetts, Vt., more recently. Lust for gold is constantly being revealed as the actuating motive of murders innumerable everywhere in the world.

In the Orford double murder, the power that drove the axe against the heads of the two elderly Davis brothers was the desire to gain the money the two men had accumulated in their thrift and which they, through odd mental workings, had thought best to carry on their persons rather than to entrust to banks. And, by the way, that axe, or the telltale finger marks on the axe, may be the means of bringing the murderer or murderers to book. Certainly, those marks seem at the present time to be the most tangible clue to the solving of the mystery. With that clue to work upon, the investigating authorities ought to find the mystery far more susceptible of solution than the common run of such sordid crimes. Let the investigation be pushed promptly.

RANDOLPH

Myron C. Washburn, a resident of Randolph until a few years ago, died Saturday at the Mary Fletcher hospital in Burlington, following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Washburn was at one time the proprietor of The Maple here and was manager for the Brigham creamery at Waterbury at the time of his death. The funeral was held at Waterbury this morning at 10 o'clock, with interment at East Randolph. Mr. Washburn was about 52 years of age. He is survived by his wife and son, John, also by one sister, Mrs. Hodges of Philadelphia, and two brothers, William and Fred, both of Randolph.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Gale W. Osha Sunday morning. There was a good attendance at grange meeting Saturday evening and the program arranged by the young women of the grange consisted of amusing stunts.

Sergt. and Mrs. H. R. Schueker and daughter, Virginia, and Prof. and Mrs. P. D. Webster and son, George, of Northfield were guests at Robert Mayo's Sunday.

Miss Abbie F. Clarke left Saturday for Windsor, where she joins a party bound for Washington, D. C., to attend the general grand chapter of the Order of Eastern Star.

Mrs. J. Carleton Jones and little son, Donald, returned Sunday from a ten days' stay in Springfield, Mass. Mr. Jones has a position in the city and the family expects to go there soon to live.

Phillip Salisbury of New York spent the end of the week with relatives here.

Sergt. and Mrs. Glen F. Bingham of Northfield spent Sunday with Mrs. Bingham's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wardner.

The Red Cross roll call was quite successfully carried out Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Alice Rumlill has been ill for several days at E. W. Tewksbury's.

Miss Pauline Hutchinson, who is in a hospital at Roxbury, Mass., for treatment, is gaining slowly.

Save With a Will! "No one doth well against his will, even though what he doth, be well," wrote Saint Augustine in his "Confessions." This intelligent and charming Bishop of Hippo, dead these fifteen hundred years, expressed an idea which is applicable to every good thing we do. In the practice of thrift, it is important that one does it with a will. Compulsory thrift robs a virtue of its joy and spontaneity. A boy will gladly save his money for a radio set, whereas he will save only half-heartedly if forced to by his parents. To Save for some definite thing is to Save with a will. If you have found saving difficult, select something that you desire and start saving for it. You will find that you, too, can save. Won't you try it to-day? Red Cross Drive Thursday, Nov. 16. There are others more unfortunate than you. Do your best!

BETHEL C. E. Dunham attended the National Milk Producers' convention in Springfield, Mass., last week. Mrs. Austin Annis has moved from the Briggs tenement on South Main street to the Gilson house opposite the inn. A Blue Triangle Outing club has been organized with 62 members under the supervision of a council consisting of Mrs. John J. Wilson, Mrs. A. N. Washburn, Miss Helen Brooks, Mrs. A. B. Washburn, Mrs. C. N. Stimets, Mrs. F. E. Wallace, Miss Margaret Wallace, Miss Elizabeth Pease and Miss Louise Fisher have been chosen leaders and Miss Elsie Haikara scribe. At least two members of the council will accompany the girls on each of the outings which will be monthly. Saturday was a perfect day for the first outing, which more than 30 attended. Mrs. Stimets, Mrs. A. B. Washburn and Miss Brooks accompanied the girls. Daniel Rhoades, aged forty-six years, died Sunday morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. William E. Rogers, where he was tenderly cared for during a long illness from cancer. Nothing could be done to arrest the progress of the disease though local physicians and a specialist were employed. He spent most of his life in Barnard and Royalton, doing farm work ten years on the Fairchild place in Royalton. He is survived by several brothers, including Frank E. Rhoades of Barnard, Eugene Rhoades of Worcester, David Rhoades of New Hampshire, William Rhoades of Braintree and Walter Rhoades of this village. The funeral was held this forenoon, with burial at the North Branch cemetery. The closest and most interesting football game of the season on the local field was won Saturday, 19 to 7, by Lebanon, N. H., high school from Whitcomb high school. The local team scored in the first period and the visitors in the second and fourth. The locals made a good try for at least a tie in the last seven minutes and pushed the ball half way up the field by steady work, and then lost it on downs by inches. The teams were evenly matched, the Whitcomb backfield excelling and the Lebanon line was a trifle stronger. The visitors were heavier by about five pounds each. Quarterback Fisher made the touchdown and kicked the goal for Whitcomb. James Harlow has gone to Springfield to work. The neighbors of David Come have given him a cow to take the place of the one strangled recently and Mr. Come feels very grateful to them all. The Universalist ladies' fair came to a successful close Friday evening with a three-act comedy by the young people of the church, which was very well presented. The orchestra furnished good music. An auction of unsold articles from the booths, conducted before the play by C. D. Cushing, provoked much merriment. The cast of characters consisted of Rev. W. C. Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Putnam, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Sturk, Fred E. Burrell, Lester M. Healy, Robert S. Noble, Misses Ruth Cushing, Adeline Clifford and Mildred Shaw. Cerols have been received announcing the marriage Nov. 10 in Manchester, N. H., of Miss Grace Davis to Arthur Kitchin. Both young people visited here last summer and the bride is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Davis, formerly of this place. A. N. Washburn and family went Saturday to Morrisville for a short visit. Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wilson were in Burlington Saturday to see the Vermont-Norwich football game and visit their son, Harold, who is a student in the University of Vermont. Mrs. Herbert Reynolds has bought from Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Burrell the house on Church street which the Burrells bought from Claude B. P. Rider, best known as the E. A. Davis house. Paul F. Wilson and family have moved into the Davis house recently bought by his mother-in-law, Mrs. Josephine L. Lilly. Charles L. Lilly shot a buck in Pittsfield last Friday. He hunted parts of two days, driving his car back and forth and carrying his brother, Morris A. Lilly. Mrs. O. E. Johnson was accompanied home from Topsham over Sunday by one of her pupils, Miss Gladys English. Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Ryther arrived in town Sunday for a stay at the Basson house. W. T. Rogers says the Democratic sweep from coast to coast in the recent election, carrying 20 Harding states for Democratic state or senatorial candidates, was a protest by American Legion men and their friends aroused by the president's veto of the bonus bill. Mr. Rogers is father of Edward
