ADDIE ADE'S ADVENTURES
The Minute-a-Day Serial 47
CHAPTER 47—Jim seemed to be starting in to live up to his promise. To camp on Addie's doorstep. The only thing he needed to be a regular camper was a tent. But this evening he had come around for advice. He also seemed a little indignant. "Say," he began, "I can't find any place to live. I guess I'll have to start camping."
COMPLAINING—From Centerville. It's only a hundred miles, and I would have from 11.30 till 2.15 in the city every day."
"You're All Excited.
AREN'T—You?" asked Addie. "Sure, I'm excited. My expenses at the hotel are so heavy that after two more weekly payments, I ought to go home."
OWN—The place—if they were on the square. I can't find any rooms to rent, and I go.
ROOM-SHOPPING—Every afternoon. It's awful. What'll I do? "Just step in at the newspaper office in the morning," said Addie. "Go.
RIGHT—Up to the front counter and put in an ad in the Rooms Wanted column. You'll.
FIND—So many rooms that you can move into a new one every day for a week if you want to. I could have.
TOLD—You that in the first place."

IF THE FARMERS SHOULD STRIKE
our country's largest industry would stop, and our food supply, which we usually give but little thought to, would become an almighty factor. Fortunately, however, the farmers don't strike. Instead, they carry on the great task of raising food for the nation, through good and bad times, regardless of railroad, coal, or other strikes. Our western farmers, to whom we must look for our daily bread, are often hampered in their work through lack of capital. The big job of the Farm Mortgage Companies is to secure this needed capital for them, for a term of years at current interest rates, from institutions and individuals having a surplus to lend. As the West is still largely dependent upon the East for funds, a large portion of the money is obtained in New England. The first mortgages on their places, which the farmers give as security for the money loaned them, are the very best kind of security, and owners of such mortgages are not disturbed over strikes and other influences which reach out and depress many forms of investments.
As one of the Pioneer Farm Mortgage Companies, the Vermont Loan and Trust Company can offer now, as in the past, the highest grade of First Mortgages of various amounts, bearing 7 per cent, 6 1/2 per cent and 6 per cent interest. All carefully selected and fully secured by fine productive farms located in the best districts, and safeguarded by a service extending to final maturity.
Call or write for our September circular and full particulars. Liberty Bonds accepted at market prices.

A Modern Necessity
Yesterday when the world moved more slowly, the executor, often an individual, performed simpler tasks at greater leisure than is possible now.
