The President's Message Ready

ness under the control of a central power. It is not his purpose to furnish specifications as to the manner in which this power should be exercised, but it is understood that he will insist that the government be vested with such authority by license or otherwise in order to deal with the far-reaching evils of over capitalization. This has been one of the things which he has constantly dwelt upon in his messages and speeches.

President Roosevelt will strongly urge that the divorce evils and the evils of southern lynching and other things interfering with the well being of the nation shall be regulated by congressional enactment. In case Congress should feel that it would be unconstitutional to handle these matters by act of Congress, then he would ask that the constitution be amended. The President regards the ever increasing number of divorces as a menace and hopes to see a remedy applied which will reduce this to a minimum. The question of reaching this subject of divorce has already come before Congress, Representative Robert W. Taylor, of Ohio, having offered a resolution in the House paving the way for a constitutional amendment.

Nowhere in the message does the President shirk responsibility. He desires earnestly to see a check upon race riots, and it is understood that his message will contain almost the exact language of the dispatch sent from Panama on the subject of the differences at Brownsville.

Political Cash Publicity. President Roosevelt will strongly urge upon Congress the passage of a law providing for the publication of expenditures made by political committees during the congressional and presidential campaigns. The President will also renew his recommendations that contributions by corporations to any political committee be forbidden, and that the directors should not be allowed to expend stockholders' money for such purposes.

Immigration will furnish another topic upon which strong recommendations will be based. At the last session of Congress the immigration bill fell by the wayside largely through the fear of the members of the House that persons of foreign birth would resent the passage of a restrictive law. The whole object of the President in urging this legislation is to exclude immigrants that are of an undesirable class. He does not desire to prevent the arrival in this country of any immigrant who will make a good citizen.

In a general way the President will deal with the question of our foreign relations; with the Monroe doctrine, the Dominican treaty, the New Foundland fisheries treaty, the subject of Atlantic immigration, the Panama canal project, which will be treated more fully in a special message; the reduction on Philippine products imported into this country, and the needs of the army and navy.

The message will be one of the most interesting that has been penned by the President since he has been in the White House, and owing to the advanced grounds he will take in the way of "progressive centralization" will attract as much attention abroad as at home.

His Day Off.

"A postmaster not many miles from Billville, posted the following notice on his shutter recently:

"All parties expectin' mail are hereby notified to git all that's comin' to 'em in advance—any time before next Thursday, that bein' the day we have appointed to go huntin'—not havin' had a holiday from the government since July 4, and the said government seemin' to forget that bein' only human, we need rest and recreation occasionally. There's some little mail here for the Joneses and the Tompkins—but it don't amount to much, as it's all got 1-cent stamps on it. There ain't nuthin' much in the business now!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Brought Fodder for Hens.

New Haven Dispatch to the New York World. Silas Horsford, whose farm abuts the Danbury branch of the New Haven road, knows the ways of Providence are inscrutable. He has been praying for fodder for his hens for the winter. A freight train of twenty-three cars was wrecked by his place this morning. Twenty-two cars were smashed. The twenty-third obligingly tumbled down into Silas's back yard and dumped several hundred bushels of corn neatly against his back door.

"That'll tickle the hens—and eggs at 45 cents," was the farmer's joyous comment. The other cars performed remarkable stunts. They tore up the embankment, and at one point razed it to a level. They tore up tracks for a quarter of a mile. They were loaded with produce, and farmers have been busy all day gathering in stores of bounty for the winter.

The Damage to the road was so serious that it will be days before trains can be run. Meantime New York trains will go by way of Bridgeport.

JOLLIFFE'S

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" Repeating Its Success.

The phenomenal success of the book-play, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," is repeating itself again this season when crowded houses greet its every appearance. This popularity is attributed to the preceding fame of the book that extended from ocean to ocean, and that the play is in itself the most genuine piece of rural life ever given to lover of bucolic drama. The simple, pure charm of the book is distinctly preserved in the play. The characters are drawn so close to life that it requires an effort to be convinced that they are not real. They are just such types as are found in every New England village and portrayed by actors who are in perfect sympathy with their roles.

In fact, it is a case of human nature appealing to human nature. Another thing that people evidently appreciate is not having their pleasure use of the artistic simplicity of the play marred by mawkish scenes and slosly incidents. The amusing scenes and those are what the play is made up of mainly—contain just wholesome, good nature, compelling laugh after laugh, and the sentimental pathos con-

Rich, rich at last," yelled Giffordson, as he rushed up the stage and caught his wife in his arms. "Rich, rich, rich." "Well, how rich?" the anxious lady asked. "Just ordinary rich, or rich enough to get a stake for Mabel?"—Chicago Record-Herald. "I am challenged to fight three duels," cried the French dandy. "My life may be in danger." "Yes," answered his opponent. "If you try to fight all those duels, you're very liable to catch cold riding around in a cab."—Washington Star. Read the Daily West Virginian.
