WHEELING, W. VA., JULY 3, 1888. NATIONAL REPUBLICAN TICKET. FOR PRESIDENT, BENJAMIN HARRISON, of Indiana.

I am for Cleveland, Free Trade and no Custom Houses.—Henry George. Republican victory, the prospects of which grow brighter every day, can be imperiled only by lack of unity in council or by acrimonious contest over men.

The Republican Legislative ticket in Ohio county looks very much like a winner. HARMONY is one of the Republic's watchwords this year, and the H thereof is very large and imposing.

The voice of the dapper is heard in the land. He conch over on the tariff question, and he is wise in his generation. There will be more of him.

The Glorious Fourth is making sweet advances to Young Tippecanoe and Protection, too. A year from now the Fourth of July will be welcomed to a front seat at the White House table.

This interest taken this year in Republican conventions of all sorts and sizes, is one of the many arguings of Republican success.

The Republicans of Ohio county have placed in the field a ticket which challenges the work of the Democratic Convention. The nominees are all well known, and they enter the race in a year which promises well for Republican nominees.

Gen. Harrison inherited an honorable name, but he has made his own career and added to the name he inherited the fame of a gallant soldier, a leading lawyer, the chief of his party in his State and the record of honorable service in the Senate of the United States.

Gov. Gray and His Little Tin Horn. When the hosts of Free Trade were assembled at St. Louis, Governor Gray, of Indiana, was put forward as the embodiment of the Democracy of the Hoosier State.

son of Indiana with the best presidency. It is recorded that the enthusiastic gathering was our old friend, Governor Gray, lustily blowing a Harrison horn.

The Intelligencer is unable to vouch for the accuracy of this report, which does so much credit to the discernment and patriotism of Governor Gray. But it is only in line with the impression made in Indiana by Harrison's nomination and the goodly promise that by election day all Hoosiers will have joined to make it unanimous.

It is easy to understand why Englishmen and English newspapers favor Mr. Cleveland and hope for the defeat of General Harrison. With Englishmen who have become American citizens, who have their money or their labor, or both invested in this country, the case is altogether different. We have no stouter Protectionists than these men, and they are always ready to render a reason.

Mr. Cleveland went into the White House without any settled opinions, but before he got there—when his party gave him reason to regard himself as a Presidential possibility—he began to try his hand at phrase-making. Here are some of his utterances just four years ago:

When we consider the message which pervades this great year, bring weakness, the alternative which we have the choice of, the temptations of personal gratification, the temptations of public opinion, and more than all, the occasion reminds me of the party most vividly of the funds in an incubation season when four years ago a horde of other eggs, I received a message from the President.

The message which pervades this great year, bring weakness, the alternative which we have the choice of, the temptations of personal gratification, the temptations of public opinion, and more than all, the occasion reminds me of the party most vividly of the funds in an incubation season when four years ago a horde of other eggs, I received a message from the President.

What manner of man is Mr. Cleveland, anyhow? The nomination of Gen. Benjamin Harrison eliminated personalities from the campaign. It is understood by the people that this content is to decide a great living issue—What shall be the future economic policy of this Government with regard to foreign imports and American industry?

But there are some Democratic organs which, owing to circumstances over which they have no control, are unable to meet the issue. The business interests of their communities and of their States are all opposed to the tariff plank of the Democratic platform, which endorses the President's Free Trade message and the Mills bill with all its defects.

Unfortunately for the Register, that organ is one of the papers so situated. Realizing its position, it is forced to resort to schemes by which the attention of Democrats may be diverted from the real issue of the campaign.

Some few Democrats may allow their intelligence to be inuited in this way, but the majority will not. They know what the vital issue of this campaign is, and they do not intend to have their minds diverted from it. They are much more concerned for their own future welfare, and how the respective party leaders stand upon a question that affects their homes and families, than how Harrison or any other man stood upon an issue which has been satisfactorily met.

That is the way the people of California regard the situation, and the people of California ought to know, if anybody does. They are satisfied with Harrison's Chinese record and are now discussing Mr. Cleveland's tariff policy.

OHIO COUNTY INSTITUTE.

The Proceedings of the Session at West Liberty Last Week. MONDAY'S SESSION. The Institute was opened at 10 a. m. by singing, followed by Scripture reading and prayer.

Prof. Anderson and Armstrong, who had been appointed instructors, first explained the design and advantages of Institutes. Miss Laura B. Wray and J. W. Downing were appointed secretaries. They made an enrollment, there being twenty members present.

The afternoon session was opened by singing after which was roll call, there being thirty-nine members present. Prof. Anderson then took up the subject of Geography. He explained the motions of the earth and the effect of such motions. He was followed by Prof. Armstrong, who spoke on the same subject.

The subject of recitations was next discussed by Prof. Armstrong and Armstrong. After roll call the subject of Reading was discussed by Prof. Armstrong, the teachers taking an active part.

Superintendent Foreman then took up the subject of Primary Arithmetic and gave a very entertaining and instructive talk. He was followed by Prof. Armstrong on the same subject. Prof. Armstrong spoke a few minutes on Spelling, Analysis of Words, etc., after which institute adjourned until afternoon.

The afternoon session was opened by singing, after which the whole institute was taken as a class and were given a short drill in spelling. Next a number were selected and formed into a history class, taught by Prof. Armstrong in the topic method.

Following this was the subject of Language Lessons, which was discussed by Mrs. Eckhart. The subject of Psychology was taken up by Prof. Armstrong, also the Different Methods of Teaching Reading.

Institute opened with forty-five members in attendance. After the opening exercises the institute was drilled for a short time on the pronunciation of words. Following this the subject of Arithmetic was taken up and discussed by J. W. Downing and Prof. Anderson.

Instruction was given in longhand and time by Messrs. Armstrong and Anderson. Mr. C. D. Kyle gave a very interesting talk on the History of Language. Prof. Armstrong next gave a short talk on Memory, and was followed by Prof. Anderson, who spoke on History—manner of teaching, etc.

The first subject discussed after opening exercises, was that of Grammar. The subject was discussed by Prof. Armstrong and others. After recess, the Institute was favored with a solo by Prof. Armstrong. Miss Venie Lee gave an interesting talk on American Literature, the necessity and manner of teaching.

Miss Ida Biggs read a paper on Music in School and Miss Ella Deters on one on Morals and Manners. The first subject taken up after noon was Civil Government, by Prof. Armstrong. This was followed by a talk on Physiology and Hygiene.

Miss Sallie Maxwell favored the Institute with music, after which was the report of the Committee on Resolutions. The resolutions having been adopted, the certificates of attendance were delivered and the Institute adjourned.

"Ten shillings," said the magistrate. "I have no money," said the prisoner. "Ten days," said the magistrate. "Prisoner (struck by a happy thought) I haven't got time, Your Worship, but he found he had."
