SEVERAL ORDINANCES

Of Importance Considered by the Council Committee.

PEOPLE'S TELEPHONE COMPANY

Request for Right of Way Modified so as to Require Underground Wires in the Business District. Street Car Fender Ordinance Postponed—Bicycle Restrictions Agreed Upon.

Last night the council committee on ordinances met promptly on the dot, as to the hour mentioned in the call, with all the seven members who are in the city present. There were several very important ordinances to be considered. The first one taken up was the ordinance already passed requiring safety fenders to be put on the electric cars. Representatives of the Wheeling Railway Company were present, and represented that it was by no means settled which was the best appliance of this kind in the market, and that the time allowed to put them on here was too short for various reasons.

The committee finally agreed to recommend to council that the ordinance be suspended until further action by this committee, and that the mayor's court be notified to this effect. It was also recommended that this committee or a sub-committee or other special committee be sent to Pittsburgh to examine into the general subject of fenders. The company was also requested to prosecute further its inquiries on the subject.

THE NEW TELEPHONE COMPANY.

The petition of the People's Telephone and Construction company for the right to erect poles and wires in the streets for the new automatic telephone was then taken up. Representatives of the company were present to present the arguments in favor of the grant. Mr. Gruse, of the committee, spoke of the desirability of having the wires put under ground in the business centre of town, and using the alleys wherever practicable in other parts of the city. He said he had counted nineteen poles in one square on the South Side. He would like to see competition in telephones, but was opposed to littering up the streets with poles.

Hon. J. J. Woods, of the company, addressed the committee. He said those interested believed they could furnish a superior service and were quite sure they could furnish telephones cheaper. To require the new company to put its wires under ground would be practically to defeat the ordinance, because it had not the money to do so. Since the underground ordinance was passed at least one company, the long distance telephone company, had put up poles in the streets. If this ordinance should pass, it was the desire and intention of the company to begin work as soon as possible. The ordinance, he thought, restricted the prices to be charged and all other features within very reasonable bounds.

Mr. C. A. Robinson, of the committee, asked if most of the stockholders in the new company were West Virginians and Wheeling men. Mr. Woods answered that the only outsider was Mr. Charles Selden, of Baltimore, a man of wide experience, who had charge of the Western Union Telegraph Company's lines. Mr. Robinson recalled the fact that two foreign companies had been granted the same right that this home company was now asking.

Mr. Alfred Caldwell spoke on behalf of the Bell Telephone Company. He said that company had spent a great deal of money to free the streets from the grave dangers caused by the presence of the wires overhead, dangers so apparent and recognized that he need not dwell on them. One man had been killed on the postoffice corner. He doubted the superiority of the new system; if it were what was claimed for it the Bell company would have sought to control it, or at least there would be people in control of so good a thing who would have ample capital to put the wires under ground.

The new system, if a success, would throw many girls and others out of employment. If it was a success, why had it not superseded the old system in New York and other large cities? He combated, also, the claim that the new system, admitting everything claimed in its favor, would cheapen the service. On the contrary it would necessitate two different telephones in every large business establishment, and so almost double the cost of the service. Experience had already shown that this was the inevitable result elsewhere. In Antwerp the Belgian government licensed three telephone companies in the hope that competition would cheapen the service, and then had to go to work and compel them to consolidate.

The new company expects to make the charge for its service much lower by securing a cheaper plant. It wanted to put the poles and wires back on the streets, although it was not alleged there was not room for another system of conduits. The long distance line just had three poles in the limits of the underground system, these being from Tenth street to the bridge. All its other wires were put under ground. He did not ask the committee not to grant the franchise, but he did protest against its granting the new company any special privileges. In other business no special favors were granted to one man or firm and not to another.

Mr. Woods responded that the new company only asked the same privilege the old one had enjoyed for years. It only asked for the right of way for poles and wires for ten years, and it was well known that the Bell Company had that right long enough to make enough revenue to pay for its improvements and pay dividends besides.

Mr. Caldwell and Mr. Woods argued some time, and then Mr. Gruse moved that the solicitor be instructed to draft an ordinance requiring the new company to put its wires under ground wherever the old company had been compelled to do so, and to use the alleys whenever practicable in other parts of town. This was passed. Mr. Robinson giving the only dissenting vote.

BICYCLE RESTRICTIONS.

The resolution calling for an ordinance regulating the use of bicycles on the streets was then taken up, and discussed at some length. It was finally decided to have an ordinance prepared forbidding a speed of over ten miles an hour, requiring a bell or horn to be used, with a light also at night, and forbidding the use of sidewalks by wheelmen.

It was decided to recommend an amendment to the ordinance forbidding stalls or booths on the streets, or sidewalks, exempting displays by regular merchants in front of their doors.

An ordinance concerning dry vaults was returned to council with a recommendation that it be sent to the health committee, which was already considering that subject. The wide tire ordinance was again informally discussed, but no decision was reached. Unfavorable action was taken on Mr. Milligan's ordinance to prohibit the ringing of bells, beating of drums or "any other noisome manner" of advertising, except by persons licensed to do so, and then the committee adjourned.
