West Virginia's Vote.

The vote of West Virginia since the organization of the state is an interesting study. It shows not only a steady and considerable increase in the aggregate, but since 1880 a beauteous growth of Republican sentiment.

Table with columns: Year, Repub., Dem., Probab., Gr'n'b'k, Total. Rows for years 1861, 1862, 1863, 1864, 1865, 1866, 1867, 1868, 1869, 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890.

Increase in the total vote between— 1870 and 1880— 13,590. 1880 and 1884— 19,441. 1884 and 1888— 25,283. 1888 and 1892— 12,698.

The largest increase in the total vote from 1884 to 1888. In 1888 the Republicans elected their nominee for governor and the Democrats stole his seat. In that year Cleveland was given the state by 500.

In the next four years, from 1888 to 1892, the increase should have been larger, for those were prosperous times and population was attracted by the opening of coal mines, coke works, and lumber camps and the development that was going on along the whole line.

In fact the increase in the total vote was but half that of the preceding period of four years. The Republican vote increased but 2,000, the Democratic 6,000. Not less than 20,000 voters were not seen at the polls in 1892.

From a comparison of the party votes in other years it is reasonable to suppose that of these about 8,000 were Democrats and about 16,000 Republicans.

If the full strength of the parties had been out the Democratic vote would have been 92,000 and the Republican 96,000, a Republican plurality of 4,000.

To-day there are fully 200,000 voters in West Virginia, and the state is Republican by between 4,000 and 5,000. This estimate is based on the normal increase and does not take into account any of the causes which have produced the recent phenomenal Republican majorities in other states.

JAPAN has made no mistake up to date. She is carefully weaving her net about China, and when the right time comes she will have that unwieldy mass in her power. Civilization will win in the contest.

Tariff Agitation.

"We repeat," says the Register, with amazing boldness, "that the Republican party to-day is the only tariff agitator in our politics." In the same issue of the Register is Prof. Wilson's Charles-Town speech. This production may have been handled by the office boy. It certainly could not have been read by the great directing mind of our esteemed cotemporary. Expressing his satisfaction with his reception Prof. Wilson said:

It speaks with unmistakable emphasis your devotion to the great cause. It means with unmistakable emphasis your sturdy support of that cause, and your determination to continue to support it until we have achieved a perfect and final victory.

The issue in American politics is joined between those who desire to hold whatever tariff reform we have achieved and continue the struggle to its complete and perfect attainment, and those who want to do away with all we have gained, and to return to the policies which have hitherto prevailed in this country.

Prof. Wilson was telling his Democratic friends what they already know, that they are expected to keep up the agitation and to keep whacking away until they shall have broken down all the tariff defenses. "The complete and perfect attainment" of "tariff reform" means to get as near to the British tariff system as the American people will stand. This is the work which is not complete and to the completion of which the Democratic party is pledged.

Prof. Wilson knows what he is talking about and does not hesitate to tell the truth concerning it. With the Register the case is quite different.

The Register illuminates its pages with a powerful cartoon—"American Labor Recognizes the Dawn of Prosperity." An American workman stands on the shore, and across the broad Atlantic is the blazing sun of Democracy and Prosperity rising over the British Isles, it may be supposed. The Register's American workman is liberal enough to hurrah over this state of affairs.

SENATOR HILL has not yet received President Cleveland's letter of congratulation. Has Mr. Cleveland forgotten how to write?

Prof. Wilson on Wheat and Wool. Prof. Wilson has found out why the price of wheat is unprecedentedly low. He made the discovery while he was in London and revealed his find at the Charles-Town meeting. We give it in his own words:

When I inquired why it was that wheat has gone down to a price much lower than it has ever sold before in the history of at least modern England and America, the answer was, there is a universal law and a production beyond a profitable demand; that not only in the United States increasing her surplus export of wheat and Russia increasing her surplus export of wheat, but Argentina is coming forward and is now third in quantity exported to European markets.

I cannot but recall the fact that I have stated it again and again before the people of this country that the American tax on the wool of Argentina made them give up their sheep raising and go into competition with you in the production of wheat.

Why, fellow citizens, suppose, instead of in the year 1894, wool had been put upon the free list ten or twenty years ago. The people of the Argentine Confederation would not be to-day printing up no more of the wheat market of England. They would be sending us the wool which we excluded from America and receiving from us in exchange for that wool such products as they need.

Think of it! Argentina gave up her sheep walks and went into wheat growing because we would not let her wool come into this country without paying a duty. There was the law of retaliation with a vengeance. To take a fall out of us the South American republic plunged headlong into a market soon to be glutted the world over.

This is the way they do business down in Argentina. If they could have sold us more of their wool they would not have done business that way. They would have kept out of the wheat business and left us so much of that as we could take from the rest of the world. Another lamentable result of this is that we have all had to "dress in shoddy," which is certainly too bad.

Prof. Wilson is off, far off, about the Argentine sheep industry. That country has not given up its sheep raising. In 1882 it produced 244,000,000 pounds of wool. In 1891 it exported 304,000,000 pounds. It stands to-day the third wool producer in the world.

The fact being quite different from Prof. Wilson's statement of it, his theory based on the false assumption falls to the ground.

Ex-Governor CAMPBELL is an entertaining talker, but there were no votes in his speech of last night. Bring 'em on! The votes are all right.

Prices and Labor Compensation.

When the Register prints one of Prof. Wilson's speeches it should give more heed to what it contains. The INTELLIGENCER is obliged once more to confront the Register with Prof. Wilson. First the Register:

How the esteemed INTELLIGENCER can figure it out that the price of labor's products, when not artificially enhanced by a trust, can fall and the wages of labor not follow to the same level is a piece of astounding reasoning that is entirely original with our own scholar. At any rate it is not true, as every workman who is old enough to know of his own experience, nor is the INTELLIGENCER's statement borne out by the census, to which it recklessly alludes, evidently without having examined it.

Next Prof. Wilson, who is championed by the Register as a man who cannot make a mistake on these questions:

It is found that it has become almost a truism to-day that high-priced labor, which is also competent and intelligent labor, and cheap products go together almost the world over.

The Register will observe that the INTELLIGENCER's reasoning is not so astounding as to keep Prof. Wilson from falling in with it. But it is useless to discuss the question with anybody who does not know that within the past generation the prices of commodities fell and the compensation of labor advanced.

It would be very sad if Prof. Wilson were to be unable to take a hand in further tearing down tariff defenses in the next Congress. It looks as though the people of his district have determined to give him all the time he needs to cultivate the acquaintance of his friends on the other side of the ocean.

YESTERDAY was the anniversary of the great fire which swept Chicago twenty-three years ago and gave to that wonder city a new birth. A community which has accomplished what Chicago has in that time may well boast of its progress.

The faithful poured into Morgantown yesterday to hear the cause of protection advocated. It was a fine turnout. We shall hear good news from Monongalia in November.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES passed away quickly, quietly, without any of the pain of dissolution. The machine had just worn out and stopped. It was the ideal end of an ideal life.

The London friends were glad to hear of Prof. Wilson's reception at home. They would rejoice more to hear of his election. If they could vote he would have a cinch on his seat.

FORTY-EIGHT prominent men of Louisiana, heretofore Democrats, have asked Governor McKinley to come there to speak. The world does move.

Not a Success.

The inauguration of Prof. Wilson's campaign at Charles Town, W. Va., yesterday, is not calculated to go down in the history of the state as among its foremost political events of the closing days of the century. From accurate reports of unbiased observers of the proceedings of the occasion it was a decidedly tame opening, and not of a character to inspire enthusiasm concerning Mr. Wilson's prospects.

The prostration of all the industries in that usually thrifty community no doubt had an influence in chilling the ardor of Mr. Wilson's former supporters, and this in spite of the fact that he took up the thread of his free trade argument where it was broken off during the ever memorable tariff struggle recently ended. In pressing the tariff forward in his opening address, Mr. Wilson must be credited with the courage of his convictions. That is the common ground on which the entire country has expected to see the battle of that district fought out.

FACTS FOR WILSON.

Tariff Reformer Turned Down.—The Economic System that the Author of the New Tariff Bill Would Have Adopted in the United States.

The return of Professor William Lookingbackward Wilson is a matter of interest. He comes, to use his own words, "sebered but unappalled by the truth forced upon us that of all human governments a free government is the most complex and difficult." Mr. Wilson will have occasion to be more and more sobered as the 6th of November approaches. Wilson will find that a free government is complex because it takes so many to run it, and they all have a hand and a voice and a vote in it.

In commercial warfare, as in military operations, it is a good motto to "find out what your opponent wants you to do, and then don't do it." It is also a safe maxim to distrust the wisdom of your own course when you find that it is giving satisfaction and advantage to your chief rival.

The United States and Great Britain are the chief commercial rivals of the world. Sharing alike the world-conquering Anglo-Saxon blood, and advancing side by side in the great march of progress, still they are in many respects exact opposites in national conditions and policies. England seated on her "snug little isle" reaches out with her mighty navy to the uttermost ends of the earth, and plays her hand in the great game of nations.

There is no continent where her flag does not float, no sea that does not bear her commerce, and no harbor where her drum beat is not heard.

The policy of the United States ever since the days of Washington has been the opposite. A continental and not a colonial policy. While England has spread herself over the world, the American people has devoted itself to building up America.

The result has been that to-day we may claim, without boasting, the leading places among the nations—first in natural resources, first in agriculture, first in mining, first in manufactures and first in domestic commerce. We have railroads sufficient to girdle the world more than seven times. We have increased in population, in wealth, in manufactures and in the distribution of wealth more rapidly than any other nation on the globe or that ever existed.

It has not been our policy to reach out and spread ourselves over the whole world, but rather to make America the best and richest country in the world, with the most intelligent, most comfortable and most enterprising people.

And that is what we have done, notwithstanding Europe has been sending to us in the last forty-five years 16,000,000 of her poorest and least intelligent population.

In 1891 the United Kingdom, including the adjacent islands, had a population of 38,104,000. In 1890 the United States had 62,622,000. To-day we have, beyond doubt, not less than 67,000,000. When the question is raised as to the comparative conditions of the two countries we need only to consult the tables of immigration. Examining these, we find that there left the United Kingdom and came to the United States the following numbers of persons in the periods named:

Table with columns: Period, Total. Rows: From 1841 to 1850 (1,017,761), From 1851 to 1860 (1,238,093), From 1861 to 1870 (1,198,979), From 1871 to 1880 (1,861,163), From 1881 to 1890 (1,466,426), From 1891 to 1894 (318,911).

Total—6,297,556. In other words, it appears that in the period named more than six and a quarter millions of people have been so attracted by the better conditions of the people of the United States that they have deemed it worth the sacrifice to exile themselves from the home of their nativity, from the scenes and companions of childhood and youth, and from all the associations of their ancestors and the graves of their sires to make a home in this new world, in a land of strangers. And they go not back again. They become the patriotic home and sinew of this great commonwealth. And no wonder. We think we have had yet times in this country this year, and yet it is prosperity itself compared with the permanent conditions of life in the United Kingdom.

Apply the test of pauperism. There was expended for the relief of paupers in the United Kingdom in 1892, £10,717,768; in 1891, £10,929,200; in 1890, £11,172,113, or almost $59,000,000 in one year. In the same years the number of paupers in the United Kingdom was as follows:

Table with columns: Year, Eng and Wales, Ireland, Scotland. Rows: 1893 (78,545, 107,771, 88,283), 1892 (75,485, 103,879, 87,362), 1891 (74,435, 102,863, 87,000).

From this it appears that in 1893 there were in the United Kingdom the astounding number of 966,323 public paupers out of an aggregate population of 38,000,000. And these are only the registered paupers, and exclusive of the vagrants and "casual poor" who are in receipt of outdoor relief.

Turn now to the United States, that "Protection robbed," "tax-ridden," God forsaken land of "robber barons" to which Professor Wilson has just returned. How does it stand?

By the census of 1890 there were, in an aggregate population of 62,622,000, 73,045 paupers, of whom 27,448 were themselves foreign born, and 3,580 were children of foreign parents, making 31,228 that we owe directly to foreign lands, and 4,107 were colored. The number of paupers both of whose parents were white natives was 21,519.

And Professor Wilson would have the United States adopt the economic system that bears such fruits and cannot create better conditions. Yes, Professor Wilson! We are sobered, and we are also appalled when we think of it.

It was a fine banquet to which you sat down in London, but a million paupers stood outside!
