WHEELING, MAY 25, 1897.

County Roads.

The county roads of West Virginia are not the chief pride of the state. In this matter West Virginia does not stand alone. For the most part the county roads of the country are not good roads. They have not been built well and they are not maintained well.

To get down to a case in point and one at home, the roads of Ohio county are not much to boast of. They have not been constructed on scientific principles and they are maintained after a system which is really no system at all, and has no redeeming features.

The money provided for keeping the roads in order is not put where it will do the most good, but where it will do the most favor for somebody who has a pull on the supervisor. It would be in the line of economy to make over all our county roads, so as to give them good foundation and good drainage and then place them in competent hands for their maintenance.

The fact is, that the work of building and maintaining roads to bring them to the highest point of efficiency for the persons who have to use them, should be in skilled hands. The country people of Ohio county should join in the demand that the county engineer be given charge of all the roads of the county, also to select his assistants and then be held strictly accountable. If this plan were to cost more it would give more in return.

The tax that shows on the tax books as the road tax is the smallest part of the cost of bad roads. The heaviest cost shows in delay and wear and tear on vehicles and horse flesh. The Intelligencer is convinced that there could not be a better expenditure of money than to get right down to the work of making the county roads of Ohio county just what they should be and then being careful to keep them up to the highest point of efficiency.

This reform would be strictly in the interest of the country and the town, the farmers and the merchants, and everybody else who has occasion to use the roads or to do business with those who do use them.

A Great Book and Its Author.

The comparatively few who have read Quo Vadis do not need to be told that it is a remarkable book. The scene is laid in Rome under Nero. We have in this work paganism and christianity placed in their strong natural contrast. The story of the struggle of the early Christians is always entertaining. In Quo Vadis this story is told with remarkable ability and made surprisingly interesting.

If the book be read for its mere attractiveness as a good story it will give great satisfaction. If it be read for its philosophical cast it will give still greater satisfaction to the mind that delights in such things. The English speaking world knows very little about the author of this book, Hendryk Sienkiewicz is a Pole, born in 1846. He tells of himself that in the early part of his life he was a wanderer, at one time strolling with a band of gypsies. Part of his life he spent in the United States in the gold diggings of California. It appears that he has written a good deal, some of it of a highly humorous character, the last thing that would be thought from the reading of Quo Vadis.

To Mr. Jeremiah Curtin we are indebted for introducing this book and its author to the English reading world. Those of us who are not acquainted with the Polish language are incapable of judging of the accuracy of the translation, but the work is said to have been faithfully done. Certainly it has been done smoothly.

In Quo Vadis we have distinctly one of the greatest romances ever produced, a work that will live and get a firmer hold with the passing years. It is a book to be read first for the infinite pleasure it gives, and then to be studied for the philosophy of the story it tells.

Democracy and Populism in Ohio.

The Bryanites are having a sad time of it in Ohio. The only chance of victory in that state—a slim one at best—is for the Democrats and Populists to keep together. But the Populists realize that they are a large and important part of the combination and want a fair chance to plunder. They are not willing to be used as mere tools of the Democrats. Specifically, they want representation on the ticket, and a pretty good representation at that. Moreover, they do not enjoy the idea of Mr. McLean, a resident of Washington and the owner of the Cincinnati Enquirer, grabbing the choicest fruit in the shape of the United States senatorship. Mr. McLean is not in any way in touch with the Populists. They know very well that he has no use for them except to profit by their votes.

They know also that if Mr. McLean carries the Ohio legislature he will bag that legislature regardless of cost. He has the money, the ambition and other things necessary to the success of this kind of campaign.

Altogether the prospect of a row in the Democratic-Populist branch in Ohio is as good as the most devoted Republican could desire it to be. It is so very good as to make more than probable the election of Mr. Hanna to succeed himself in the United States senate. This will be a very good result of the row. Mr. Hanna is a good man to keep in the United States senate.

Prices Under Protection.

The Democratic Pittsburgh Post takes up the wall of the importers prophesying advanced prices under the pending tariff law, and takes occasion to speak of the high prices under the McKinley law. The fact is that under the McKinley law prices did not run high. The tariff liar got loose while the McKinley law was pending and fooled a great many people into believing that the passage of the bill would at once cause a rapid and considerable advance in prices. Some dealers who stocked up under that impression had reason to rue it.

Under the McKinley law the country was prosperous and prices were as low as was consistent with fair profits and good remuneration to labor. The free trade school of politics, economy takes into no account the remuneration of producers. So long as commodities are cheap that school does not concern itself about the compensation of producers.

It is true that protection permits payment of better wages than can be paid under free trade or any approach to that condition; that it gives producers better purchasing power than they can get in any other way, and by according protection to home industries creates competition that brings down prices.

This is a very brief chapter in the history of protection in the United States. It is in strict accord with the record. It is a fact that cannot be upset, and when free traders try to upset it they are driving to a sorry expedient the manufacturers to support their free trade theory.

One on Sir Julian.

Sir Julian Pauncifote, ambassador of her British majesty to this country, gave a garden party to the delegates attending the universal postal convention. Sir Julian's method of telling these distinguished gentlemen that they were expected at his embassy was to issue a notice to them in bulk, which he caused to be conveyed through the president of the convention.

At this wholesale manner of extending British courtesy many of the delegates took umbrage and did not attend. They held, and rightly, that the etiquette of the occasion demanded that an invitation be sent to each delegate. Sir Julian Pauncifote is a diplomat who insists upon the observance of all the nice points in matters of etiquette. He carries this so far that when everybody else thinks matters are moving smoothly Sir Julian invents a new code of etiquette and embellishes the same with some nice points which he manages to stick into his own diplomatic flesh.

This being true of Sir Julian, there is much wonderment in Washington at his manner of inviting distinguished gentlemen to his house, as if they were a herd of something or other. Until we hear something that will exculpate Sir Julian from the accusation of having done a left-handed thing, we shall feel obliged to think that the brethren in Washington have one on Sir Julian. What will Belgravia say to this?

Our Old Friend Doe.

Mr. Joseph S. Doe, of Janesville, Wis., was assistant secretary of war under Mr. Cleveland. When the new administration went in Mr. Assistant Secretary Doe went out in a hurry, all along having been detected in laying up much treasure for himself at government expense. It will be recalled that Brother Doe had purchased and caused to be made for him at the cost of the treasury many articles for the furnishing and adornment of his home in Janesville, Wis.

It was thought at the time that Mr. Doe was playing in luck to be let off so gently. Now it appears that Mr. Doe's desires, ambition and talent ran to other things besides furniture, flags and other ornaments. It occurred to him that he should have a fine saddle horse, and accordingly he had the assistant quartermaster general of the army at Chicago buy one for him and charge the same to the government account. This little vagary of Mr. Doe's was discovered in time to save the government, but the unfortunate assistant quartermaster general is let in to the cost of Mr. Doe's saddle horse.

Taking it for granted that we intend to make an exhibition of our products at the Paris Exposition in 1900, we take the liberty to urge that Mr. Doe be stuffed and sent to Paris for the contemplation of an awe-stricken world. Does he not grow on every bush.

The Scene in the Presbyterian Assembly.

There must have been a shocking scene the other day in the Presbyterian general assembly when one of the delegates charged financial crookedness to one or more of the church boards and one of the delegates was given the lie direct. The whole incident is such a one that should not occur in such a body. But the main point is not the giving of the lie, it is the accusation of financial crookedness. It is presumed that this accusation will be looked into very carefully.

The great Presbyterian body cannot afford to have any of its boards rest under so ugly a charge. Its agents are human and may have erred. If they have they should be displaced or punished, or both, according to the gravity of the offense. The hundreds and thousands of persons who confide their money and their church work to these boards have a right to know whether their money is misplaced and their confidence abused.

What a Match Did.

In a tenement house in New York a careless man lit a match and threw it on the floor. The building took fire, and women and children lost their lives, several persons were injured and there was considerable money loss. The man who lit the match did not foresee all this and the result of his carelessness must be costing him great suffering. He is like many other persons who are careless in the use of matches.

A match often seems to have exhausted itself when in fact it still retains great power for harm. A good way to dispose of a "dead match" is first to make sure that it is dead and then to place it where it could not possibly do any damage. If we knew the real origin of every fire we should be able to trace to "dead matches" many a bad disaster.

The Wheeling & Elm Grove company has been of great service to this community and should be granted cheerfully every reasonable demand. There is one thing to be said for the men at the head of that company; whatever they say they will do they will do.

If Edhem Pasha be a true knight he will be glad to agree to reasonable peace conditions of the Greeks. But he is a Turk and his imperial master is another Turk. So the conditions will be as hard as Europe will permit them to be.

Greeks arriving in the fatherland from the United States are not so uproariously received as they were a week or two ago. The fact is that fighting men are not what Greece wants now. She is in need of men of diplomacy.

Observe that while there is something of a hurricane over the Cuban matter your Uncle William McKinley keeps a cool head and a firm grip. That is the kind of man to have at the helm.

A TANDEM FOR LIFE

It was the Only View of Matrimony that Appealed to Her, so she Accepted.

"I could never surrender my independence for any man," she said, and she meant it from the bottom of her heart.

She was not old, but she glared in being New.

She could recite the Declaration of Independence without missing a word, and she could greatly improve the document in several places, she declared, by simply inserting the five letters that form "w-o-m-a-n."

She knew all about the gold reserve, the national debt, the tariff question, and the crimes of '73, and she could tell what 16 to 1 meant without half trying.

She wanted to vote and sit on juries, and—do things.

They had ridden to the park on a tandem bicycle, and were sitting on a bench resting and settling various matters of moment.

"It would not be your surrender alone," he said, thoughtfully. "It would be his surrender as well."

She shook her head. "But not to the same extent. The marriage ceremony doesn't say anything about his promising to 'obey' her, does it?"

"You are too strong for me in argument," he said, sadly. "but if you will be my wife I shall not ask you to obey."

"Your wife!" she cried, with a start of surprise. "I had not thought of such a thing."

A blush stole into her cheek, and her thoughtful smile was kind.

"Your wife?" she repeated. "But no one has asked me to be your wife."

"I ask it now, then," he murmured, earnestly. "Will you be my wife? Just think, dear one, how happy we would be riding a tandem together through life!"

Riding tandem together through life! she cried with enthusiasm. "My answer—my answer is 'Yes.' Riding tandem together is the only view of matrimony that appeals to me in the least. You could not have chosen a more pleasing metaphor."

"What do you mean, dear one?" he asked, his eyes aglow with happiness.

"What do I mean?" she repeated, her face reflecting the bright future that opened before her. "Why, don't you know, dear, that when a man and woman decide to ride tandem together, the man always cheerfully takes a back seat?"

They have been married only a year, but even now he is known of all men and women as "Mr. Strong, Mynd's Husband."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is positive evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine, and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the Intelligencer and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.
