COREY'S PRINCELY HOME

CHATEAU VILLEGENISSE ONCE BELONGED TO PRINCE JEROME BONAPARTE.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ellis Corey are enjoying connubial bliss at the Chateau Villegenis, a country place not far from Paris, which is said to have cost the president of the United States Steel Corporation $1,000,000 and which he presented to Mabelle Gilman before she became his bride. There they enjoy absolute seclusion. Reporters, whom Corey holds in horror are not allowed to pass the gates, which give ingress to extensive grounds and which are strictly guaranteed.

I am in a position, however, to furnish the following details, obtained from a person who today paid a visit to the chateau and had a conversation with Corey.

The Coreys arrived at Villegenis, which is less than an hour's distance by rail from Paris, on Tuesday. Their trip from Cherbourg in the automobile which was waiting for them on the arrival of the Kaiser Wilhelm II was without incident that calls for remark. My informant, who is not connected with a newspaper and who had business with Corey, said he nevertheless approached the chateau with some misgivings, as he did not quite know whether the happy bridegroom was in a mood to discuss a business question of any sort.

"The chateau," he continued, "is a magnificent place with a lovely setting, which Prince Jerome Bonaparte formerly owned and which Napoleon III and Empress Eugenie frequently visited during imperial days. In my opinion the state is the most magnificent within a radius of 50 miles of Paris. It is justly celebrated for its trees of magnificent growth. A big wall surrounds the park and the avenue entrance, which is closed by iron gates, stretches from there for half a mile to the chateau.

GOOD WORD FOR CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

People everywhere take pleasure in testifying to the good qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. Edward Phillips of Barclay, Md., writes: "I wish to tell you that I can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My little girl, Catherine, who is two years old, has been taking this remedy whenever she has had a cold since she was two months old. About a month ago I contracted a dreadful cold myself, but I took Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and was soon as well as ever." This remedy.

"In the house is a formidable barrier of servants, not one of whom will, as a rule, as much as take a card from a visitor unless he has had orders to admit him. One saloon, I gleaned, is called the Persian room, and is a marvel of Oriental furnishings, being filled with rare rugs, mosaics, inlaid tables and embroidered silk hangings.

"Very old ivy-covered trees make up a wooden park around the chateau. Half a dozen other ancient groves dot spacious meadows through which are cut out broad, smooth roads, most inviting to motorists. On the splendid estate are lakes, fish ponds, a winter garden of perennial shrubs and hothouses filled with rare flowers. In the grounds stand Greek statues and old bronzes. The whole estate gives a lasting impression of beauty, age and spaciousness.

"On my arrival I sent in my card and was told that Mr. and Mrs. Corey were out walking in the park. Would wait? I sat amid their lovely setting which I have inadequately described and waited. Then the steel magnate, with a happy look on his face and the new Mrs. Corey on his arm, came slowly toward the chateau. The bride and bridegroom had apparently forgotten all cares and sorrows. I was very civilly received on introducing myself and came away with the impression that Corey is very happy.—Paris Correspondent.

The department of agriculture has issued a circular calling the attention of sportsmen and game dealers to an outbreak of disease among the quail of the country, which threatens serious results. Not enough is known about the disease to make the diagnosis absolutely certain, and the department's circular asks for information on which the base treatment and protective measures. But the outbreak is suspiciously like the dreaded "grouse disease," which has played havoc with the game bird of England for nearly a century.
