"I do not know much about the tariff, but I know this much, when we buy manufactured goods abroad, we get the goods and the foreigner gets the money. When we buy manufactured goods at home, we get both the goods and the money."

Abraham Lincoln.

Win on Labor Hughes on Labor

"There are some who regard organized labor as a source of strife and menace of difficulty; I regard it as a fine opportunity for the improving of the conditions of the workingman."
Charles E. Hughes. (1908.)

"The mission of labor organizations is one of the finest that any organization of men could guard."
Charles E. Hughes. (1908.)

"He was the greatest friend of labor laws that ever occupied the governor's chair. He signed fifty-six labor laws (one third of all passed in the state since 1777), among them many of the best ever enacted in this or any other state. He urged the enactment of labor laws in his messages to the legislature, even going so far as to demand a labor law at an extra session. Human rights has a steadfast and sympathetic upholder in the new justice."
N. Y. Legislative Labor News. (1910.)

"These are not new opinions from the Republican candidate nor a recent estimate concerning him. Hughes recorded his stand on labor not when a candidate for office, but as governor of New York soon to retire from political life to become a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, where he expected to remain for the rest of his life. They were the convictions of Charles E. Hughes on the eve of joining the highest tribunal in America, a court of last resort---at a time and in a situation when no possible advantage could accrue to him from any public expression. No estimate of his fitness to fill the office of President with firmness, fairness and justice can be stronger than the above comment from a review of his career as governor by the organ of the New York State Federation of Labor. He has no need to talk---he has done. He said what he believed then---he believes what he said, now. Therefore we support the candidacy and the convictions of Charles E. Hughes.

These convictions of a Presidential candidate when he was in public life---when he was not running for office---when he was not looking for votes. They are the expressions of a scholar, the teacher of political economy, the writer of text-books and histories. Not the considered opinions of an under-graduate but the reasoning of a seasoned mind---of a university man.

These are the views that Woodrow Wilson held when he was preparing to take office, and he held them when he was surrounded by the hands of young men for their administrative responses, forming their judgement upon the relations between employer and employe, fulfilling his function of inter- and advisor toward countless students who have since engaged in business for themselves, become executive heads of organizations or teachers in turn for another generation of future employers of labor.

These are the opinions which he held when he did not expect to hold office, when it did not advantage him to express any other opinions.

Woodrow Wilson did not claim to become a friend in need to labor who had need of labor's friendship for his re-election.

Because this is typical of the man---because it is impossible to know what he really believes or how long he will continue to believe anything he claims to believe---because he is inconsistent and indecisive---we oppose his re-election.

THE THEATRES

NEIL O'BRIEN'S MINSTRELS.

Neil O'Brien's Great American Minstrels will be the attraction at the Grand Theatre Thursday, November 10, in their performances, matinee and night. This will be the fifth season of the O'Brien Minstrels under the management of Oscar F. Hodges, and the promise is given that the program this year will be an entirely new one without a single song or obsolete feature. Among the novelties will be a new sketch written and acted by himself, written and produced by him, called "The Jitney Joe Bus," which is described as a merry satirical satire and said to be a laugh from start to finish. Other features are a new song and dance act staged by James Gorman, called "The Ebony Yacht Club" which entitles the services of ten of America's most nimble footed dancers, Eddie Rose, the comedian, who was so well liked last year will again be in evidence with his band, and this time he will be given an entirely new monologue. There will be a new one-act farce which calls for the full strength of the company called "The Bold, Brave, Black and Tan." This playlet was used in the Priests Frolic when that organization was on tour recently, written by Geo. M. Cochran, and it was through the courtesy of the young playwright that it was secured for Mr. O'Brien's use this season. There will be singers, dancers and comedians galore in the first part, and an entirely new idea in the way of a stage setting. There will be a Monday parade of the minstrel boys, and it is said that this street display will be well worth witnessing.
