NORTH END REPUBLICAN MEETING

At Sixth Street an Enthusiastic One. Addresses by Eminent Speakers.

DELIVER STRONG ARGUMENTS

In Support of the Republican Platform and Candidates—One Thousand Persons Present.

From a platform improvised for the occasion citizens of the North End heard the principles of Republican faith expounded by eminent speakers last evening. About 1,000 persons gathered on Sixth street and a more enthusiastic crowd could not well be imagined. All the speeches were punctuated with applause and every mention of McKinley was the signal of handclapping and cheering.

Jacob Snyder, secretary of the congressional committee, in a neat speech, introduced Will Caldwell as chairman of the meeting. He gave a brief talk on imperialism, illustrating the inconsistency of the Democratic party in opposing that doctrine and in a few words of eulogy introduced Congressman B. B. Dovenor.

The captain said he did not come there to indulge in any eloquent platitudes. He invited any person to challenge any statement he made if they thought they were not true. He read some cuttings from the Register and easily disposed of them. This paper had said that Judge Freer and Senator Burrows in their speeches at the Opera House had said nothing of imperialism, but were content in discussing the tariff and money questions. The question in 1896 was how to restore prosperity. After the people had ferreted it out they voted for William McKinley, the advance agent of prosperity. The question now was how to retain prosperity. Bryan was the last man on God's green earth that should fight imperialism.

No Dodging.

The speaker said he was not going to dodge the issue of imperialism and trusts, but would discuss them from the point of fact and experience. There was no such thing in this country as imperialism. It was simply a blind of the Democrats to cover up another object in view. If elected they would bridge 16 to 1 on the country.

Continuing, Captain Dovenor said there should be no law against trusts. The first trust we ever formed in this country was the sugar trust, made possible by the Wilson bill. Bryan was a member of the ways and means committee that framed that document. This committee, he said, ought to have been called the committee on mean ways. This bill had spread ruin and distress throughout the country and created militarism. Three millions of men were thrown into idleness, starving and hunting work. Bryan had the impudence to tell the workmen what a wonderful stagnation of business there was in this country and at the same time Moore Jackson declined to run for Congress on the Democratic ticket because there was too much prosperity and business in this country and he did not have the time. We wanted more money instead of Moore Jackson.

Bryan's Inconsistency.

Captain Dovenor then showed up the inconsistency of Bryan denouncing the Republican policy in the Philippines when he, by lobbying in the senate, had influenced the Democratic senators to vote for the Paris treaty that provided for the purchase of the islands and was, therefore, himself directly responsible for our possession of the islands. The Democrats pretended to get warm about trusts when they had a great ice trust to keep them cool. The speaker referred to the Democratic cry of ruling without the consent of the governed and explained how Florida, Louisiana and all the western states had been purchased and otherwise acquired without the consent of the governed. New Mexico and the District of Columbia had representatives in Congress, but they had no vote. He asked if they were being governed with their consent. He also referred to the Democratic disfranchisement of the negro in the south and wanted to know if they were being governed with their consent. After the captain had concluded with a strong argument in justification of the government's policy in the Philippines, he was cheered to the echo.

Mr. Arbenz Talks.

The chairman then introduced John Arbenz as the next speaker. Mr. Arbenz said he considered himself presumptuous in endeavoring to talk after so eloquent a speaker as Captain Dovenor and he would be brief. His address was replete with illustrations that put the crowd in good humor. He said the Democrats referred to every act of the Republican party as unconstitutional. In 1776, when our forefathers established a confederate government their cry was "Unconstitutional." It was the same when the Republicans established roads, when they enacted a tariff fostering industry, when they carried out the late war and when they established a sound currency basis.

Mr. Arbenz concluded his address amidst applause and was followed by Abraham McColloch, candidate for the legislature. He said the Republican platform had no paramount issue, every plank in it standing on an equality and when they fought for one they fought for all. He referred to Bryan as a farmer and said that he, too, was a farmer. He said if Bryan, as he claimed, raised forty bushels of oats to the acre and netted 5 per cent, he proved he was a prosperous farmer. Any farmer netting over and above that was doing well.

George Laughlin, another legislative candidate, was the next speaker. Protection, he said, had built all the industries in this country. The Republican tariff was responsible for all these industries and we owed something to the party for that. They put a tariff on tin plate and tin plate factories spring up all over the country. Bryan did not understand these great propositions and we must look to the Republican party to handle them.

Party of Sixteen Tails.

Frank W. Nesbitt, candidate for prosecuting attorney, was then introduced. He said it was the first time in four years he had been given an opportunity of addressing a North Wheeling audience. Political parties represent great policies. There were two great parties, one standing alone and the other with sixteen tails to its kite. Each party represented the principles set forth in its platform. One stood for American labor, sound money gold standard and expansion of our great and glorious country. The other stood for free trade, free silver and little one-horse America. We were to choose between these two as there is no possibility of any of the other parties winning. Mr. Nesbitt's remarks, though brief, were eloquent and his closing remarks were greeted with great applause.

Henry Steek and S. S. Smith, candidates for the legislature, were the last speakers and after they concluded, Chairman Caldwell proposed three cheers for McKinley and Roosevelt. They were given lustily and with a determination that presages Republican victory at the polls this fall.

Triadelphia Rough Riders.

The Triadelphia district Republican Club met at Hand's hall last night, for the purpose of organizing a Rough Riders company, and was called to order by President George Humphrey. J. A. Birkett acted as secretary. A committee of six, one from each precinct, was appointed to solicit names for membership, as follows: Precinct No. 1, Harry Humphrey; No. 2, Charles Selbert; No. 3, J. A. Birkett; No. 4, J. T. Carter, Jr.; No. 5, U. M. Hervey; No. 6, Charles Sample. Clark McKee was appointed organizer and manager of a drum corps.

Island Republicans Meet.

The Island Republicans held an informal meeting at the hose house last evening, Dr. Etzier presiding and Mr. Alf Davis acting as secretary. The organization of a marching club was discussed, and there is no doubt but that a club from the Seventh ward will be found in the line of parade this campaign. Owing to the cramped quarters final action was postponed until next Monday evening, when it is hoped Myers' hall, corner of Penn and Virginia streets will be secured. Before adjournment committees were appointed to secure speakers and permanent headquarters.

Centre District Republicans.

The Centre district Republican club held a god meeting last evening, at their headquarters in Hartmann's hall, corner Market and Twenty-third street, with President C. D. Thompson in the chair. There was an enrollment of fifty members last night, when the club adjourned to meet on Saturday evening, when it is expected the membership will be increased to over one hundred.

Eighth Ward Club To-night.

A meeting of Company A, of the Rough Riders is called for 7:30 to-night at their hall, corner Thirty-third and Jacob streets. The meeting is called by the order of Captain Ben Honecker, and is for the purpose of being measured for uniforms.
