EVERY HEAD THAT SHOWED UP

Signed a Well Deserved Rap at Candidate Bryan's Hands.

A Visit to General Harrison and Ex-President Ingals About Populistic and the Helpless-ness of Voters Who are Under the Power of the Great Corporations—Mr. Bryan Has Nothing to Take Back—He Never Said He Would Free Silver Would Produce Panic—Believes Just the Opposite—A Bishop Who Thinks Workingmen's Sons are Too Well Educated—A Reply That is Strictly to Old Point.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 24.—Early this morning Wm. J. Bryan began his journey to Illinois. At 8 o'clock he spoke at Peru and a good-sized crowd cheered the utterances of the gold democrats. Much was devoted to the main to points, shaking up of the men whom they had nominated a ticket in order to make it a Republican.

Ex-President Harrison and Ex-President of the Big Four Railroad, passed through Indianapolis this morning and were given a few words. Gov. Mr. Bryan spoke from a platform to the rear of the train to a large gathering of the admirers of himself and Gov. Altgeld. The action of the gentleman during the strike of three years ago were here and at Peru. The Valley made the streets there a mass of supporters of him, and the crowds were full of pieces this morning showed unmistakable evidence of affection for the distinguished man and for the presidential candidate. At La Salle Mr. Bryan said:

"I am delighted that distinguished man have called attention because of advice which I have given to railroad employes. In speaking to railroad employes, I said that in these hard times employment is so difficult that I did not want to advise laboring men to do anything which would lose them their employment, and added that I would wear Republican buttons if necessary, march in Republican parades and even contribute to the Republican campaign fund if that was required by their employers, but that they should vote according to their convictions on election day. Mr. Ingalls, the president of a railroad, in a speech at Cincinnati, declared that in advising employes to vote their employers, and ex-President Harrison has charged me with blame immorality in giving the advice I have given. Now I decline to justify my position. The right of suffrage is the highest right of a citizen. Coercion is a violation of law, and when I advise employes to vote as they please, even though they wear Republican buttons and march in Republican parades, I am appealing to their moral grounds and giving them better moral advice than those who advise coercion and appeal to employes to vote the Republican ticket on election day, merely because they have been compelled to wear Republican buttons during the campaign. When a man comes to me for advising employes to vote according to their honest convictions at the ballot box, I ask what such people would have had in Australian ballot. The Australian ballot is a secret ballot, and is used in this country in all the States. American citizens in every State are entitled according to constitutional provisions to vote without being subjected to disturbance or intimidation.

In fact, they condemn the efforts of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Ingalls to compel men to vote as they please, even though they wear Republican buttons and march in Republican parades. I am willing to trust the American people to condemn the efforts of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Ingalls to compel men to vote as they please, even though they wear Republican buttons and march in Republican parades, I am willing to trust the American people to condemn equally
