POLITICAL GOSSIP AT NATIONAL SEAT

(By Charles Brooks Smith.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Mr. William Gibbs McAdoo who, by virtue of being a son-in-law, is a member of the president's private family is soon to hand in his resignation as a member of the president's official family, according to creditable authority. There is no family trouble, not a bit of that sort of unpleasant thing; merely another evidence of the family's thrifty traits. Mr. McAdoo is to cease being the secretary of the treasury and become the successor of Mr. Charles S. Hamlin, the head of the federal reserve board. Mr. Hamlin, who was appointed for the shortest term membership of that body, draws $10,000 a year and wields a powerful influence over the monetary affairs of the country. Son-in-law McAdoo as his successor will take all of that and more too, because Mr. McAdoo will be appointed for a term of ten years. It's a sure thing as against playing a hazard, for the signs and portents of the times merge themselves to indicate that as secretary of the treasury Mr. McAdoo has only till high noon of the next fourth day of March to serve.

Those of retentive minds will remember that, when the federal reserve board was appointed and Mr. Hamlin, the shortest-termed appointee was designated to head the board, that it was stated in this correspondence that that was done to provide a more permanent official berth for the president's then newly-become son-in-law. The far-thought out plan of the family fireside is now soon to be put into effect.

Pondering a set of figures put out by the claim agents of the Democratic national committee, Congressman George M. Bowers, who has forgotten more politics than most present-day politicians ever knew, was wont to fall back on the epigram of that famous unknown person who gave us, "figures never lie, but liars figure". Which reminded another of the party that old Gordon Graham had stated it in this wise: "Figures never lie. The only reason why they don't is because they can't talk."

Pointing to the figures which he held in his hand, the Second district representative proceeded: "On these figures the Democratic campaign managers are claiming that their party will win the coming election, but for the life of me I can't figure how it will, if it be true that figures never lie. In order to win the election the Democrats will have to get 266 electoral votes, the total number of electoral votes in the electoral college being 531. Grant that they carry all the southern states, with a total number of 110 votes, they will then have to carry all the 'border' states, including Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, Oklahoma and Tennessee, and in addition to these, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada and New Jersey, they would also have to carry Illinois, with its twenty-nine votes or Ohio with twenty-four votes. Of course, if thel were to carry New York, they could lose a few of the states that are counted for them as possible.

"On the other hand, the Republicans could lose New York and by carrying Colorado, Delaware, Idaho and Montana, all of which are most likely to go Republican, and still have enough votes to win. In the law of chance, it seems to me that the Republicans have all the best of it, for there are so many combinations that can give them victory, whereas there are only one or two or three combinations that can give the Democrats the election".

Thanks to the first official statement stunt pulled by State Chairman Charles Cameron Lewis, junior, the Republican colony felt the tickling lawfter, too—which caused the business man debutant of West Virginia politics, pain and peeve. Forthwith he showed it in a formal statement in which he took the aforesaid low-brow Republican editors to tawsk—O, rawther severely, Old Top—and assured the blighters that the platform, was really now, not intended as a joke, but was a real serious and solemn writing, and should be so considered and commented upon. It's deadly earnest stuff, he said, and it was unfair and ungentlemanly, not to say discourteous, uncultured and denatured, to treat as a masterpiece of slapstick humor such as is witnessed in low halls of vaudeville, a work that was, in his opinion at least—and he feels very cocksure of his estimate of it—a literary classic not to be surpassed since the period of Baron Munchausen. The rough-neck Republican editors should be ashamed of themselves and feel humiliated over their gross stupidity, he intimates, and in the future deport themselves toward the document with the melancholy gravity and profound solemnity of mien and mind which should be accorded this epic document born of the twin intellectual genius of Charley Osenton and of their risibilities—and in this kind of Washington weltering weather to cause the broad grin and the course guffaw is no easy matter. It must be some funny crack when it draws that. The Gops say it's the best wheeze of the midsummer political season.

Of course, they refer to Chairman Lewis's slap-on-the-wrist for editors of the Republican press in West Virginia who received the platform of the Democratic state convention with laughter—O, very course, vulgar Clyde Johnson. Now will you be good?

What with the heat, this Lewis's interview came near prostrating some of the West Virginians here. They nearly laughed themselves into the heaves. "With his nerve and his money", said one of them, "it wouldn't take me long to own the politics of the old home state."

Hon. Oscar Jenkins, of Parkersburg, is a friend of our'n and we are a friend of his'n. Warning is hereby given that any curbstone comedian contemplating springing a quip to the effect that since Oscar has been made manager of the congressional candidacy of Mr. Null, of Huntington, that renders it Null and void, will be prosecuted to the full extent of the speed laws.
