STOMACH TROUBLE FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advices from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headache so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die. I tried different treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good. I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Thedford's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it. I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it. I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me." Thedford's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest. OUR BOYS and GIRLS

THE STORY OF JIMMY RABBIT.

Jimmy Rabbit had a brand new suit. It was red, with gold buttons and a white sailor collar; a truly beautiful garment. His mother had made it for him, and when he put it on for the first time she was even more proud of it than he was; and that is saying a good deal, for Jimmy was so proud that he kept running to the mirror to admire it every five minutes and he almost forgot to start for school.

They got him off at last, and his mother and sister Susie stood at the window to wave him goodby.

Jimmy hopped and skipped and danced along the way, swinging his school books at the end of the strap and singing as he went.

The road to school led through a dark forest which was the home of a great eagle, but as it was broad daylight Jimmy was not afraid, but kept on hopping and skipping and swinging his school books, but just as he came near the tree where the eagle's nest was he gave such a particularly violent hop and skip and swung his school books with so much energy that they broke from his grasp and went flying up into the air—and up and up until they landed right in the eagle's nest.

He climbed carefully so as not to hurt his new suit, so it was rather slow progress, but at last he reached the edge of the nest and looked over. There were the books all safe and sound, but underneath them, crushed to a shapeless mass, was the eagle's very favorite egg.

Now, of course, Jimmy didn't know that it was the eagle's very favorite egg, so he wasn't so sorry, and he was just about to pick up his books and climb down the tree again, when he heard a tremendous flutter of wings and the angry voice of the eagle shrieking. "Oh, you naughty, naughty Jimmy Rabbit! You've broken my very favorite egg," and before Jimmy had time to apologize politely the eagle swooped down from the treetop and, seizing him in one claw and the school books in the other, it mounted again into the air and flew away over the forest.

Jimmy was so frightened that the brass buttons on his new suit rattled with his shiverings.

At last the eagle swooped down from the heights and put down Jimmy and the school books on a tiny little island in the midst of the boundless sea; "There, now," it said crossly, "I've put you in a place where you won't smash my eggs again!"

Jimmy was much distressed when he found where he was, for if the eagle left him he did not know how he would ever be able to get back again, and he feared that if he ever did manage to get off he would be late for school, a thing which had not happened to him for a whole year, so he approached the eagle, which was resting on a rock, before setting out on his homeward flight and endeavored to soften its hard heart, but the eagle wouldn't soften a bit, and only replied, "Go away and don't bother me!" to everything that Jimmy said till Jimmy was in despair.

At last he cried: "Oh, eagle! if you'll take me home again I'll give you six of my new brass buttons."

"What do I want with brass buttons?" asked the eagle.

"Why," explained Jimmy, "you can string them on my school book strap—I'll give you that, too—and wear them as a necklace."

At this the eagle opened first one eye, and then the other; he had kept them obstinately closed up to this time, and said: "Oh, all right; hop on my back," and in a second Jimmy found himself again sailing through the air.

The eagle was now in an amiable frame of mind, and at Jimmy's request he carried him directly to the school door, just as the bell was ringing.

Then Jimmy gave him the buttons and the school book strap, and the eagle flew away with them, well pleased.

When Jimmy came home that afternoon his mother was much astonished at the disappearance of six of his buttons; at first she thought it careless of him to lose six in one day, but when he explained that he had given them to the eagle she felt better about it, and sewed on six new ones for him, but she told him in the future to be careful about swinging his books, for eagles were not always good tempered, and if he were to break the eagle's eggs again it might not be approved even with new brass buttons.—Elizabeth C. Webb.

"Kind friend," whined a beggar, "I'm trying to get to Glasgow, and I've got the price of a ticket all but sixpence. Will you help me out?"

"No; but I can give you some excellent advice," replied the gentleman he addressed. "Take the train to within a sixpenny fare of Glasgow and then walk."—Tit-Bits.

If not, it's wicked to neglect illness and means of relief. It's wicked to endure liver ills, headache, indigestion, constipation, when one dose of Po-Do-Lax gives relief. Po-Do-Lax is Podo-phylin (May Apple) without the gripe. It attacks the liver, incites the flow of bile—nature's antiseptic in the bowels. Your constipation and other ills disappear overnight because Po-Do-Lax has helped nature to remove the cause. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Get rid of your constipation overnight. adv

Creating Criminals.

The way our courts are being conducted at present is creating criminals by the score. It seems that if a man has a little money and a good standing in society he is in a measure immune from the laws of our land. There are many laws on the statute books that are so full of loopholes and technic points it is impossible to convict the guilt or let the innocent go free without great cost.—Ex.

Every investor should have a ward. A ward's estate is a great convenience in unloading financial indiscretions.
