

Five years ago The Hub Clothing Co., leased its home at 123 Main Street, and from the very instance became one of the most popular clothing mercantile institutions in Fairmont. The Hub name became associated with quality merchandise that won favor with hundreds of families in this vicinity. Its clientele grew and grew until the fact became evident that larger quarters, a more commodious house and greater stocks would be a necessity to properly and profitably uphold its reputation which The Hub name so honestly cherished.

For months larger quarters were sought. Every means, every energy, every legitimate avenue was employed to secure these more commodious quarters which The Hub wanted and which it knew it must secure in order to thrive—but a new home could not be found that would accommodate the ideas of advancement which the manager of The Hub termed progress.

Therefore it was decided that because its present location at 123 Main Street was too small and larger quarters could not be secured, The Hub would retire from business.

A sale of its entire stock, fixturers and furniture go in effect at once. All accounts outstanding due the Hub must be paid within the next 30 days.

You can read on this page a few of the items at sale prices that will quickly convince all economical people how this sale, right in the heart of the winter season, will save them thousands of dollars. Many articles, because of lack of space, will be on sale, but not mentioned here. All Christmas goods, just received reduced for a quick clearance. Watch the daily papers for new advertisements. The Hub will retire from business, but before it goes you have a chance to secure some of the Hub quality merchandise at a fraction of its worth.
