A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Italian Dies of Brooding Over War

Heart broken and reduced to a nervous wreck because he believed his people fell victims to the ravages of war, Frank Simicic, an Italian, died at the State Hospital at Weston last night. Today Sheriff A. M. Glover was informed of Simicic's death.

Some time ago he communicated with his relatives in Italy, but failed to hear from them. This caused him to brood over the sorrow and finally he became mentally unbalanced. His removal to the State Hospital at Weston followed.

Simicic formerly worked in the mines and resided in Chiefton, Grant township. His brother, Tony, lives at Chiefton.

Jailed Man Informs On Illegal Sellers

Suspicion that bootlegging is being carried on in Farmington was warranted for the officers through a civil suit learned that foreigners are at work at this game.

In a civil suit a judgment was given against Andy Ropicic, an Italian, and his auto was about to be levied upon, but on Monday night it is claimed that it was set on fire by its owner. The man who held the judgment then swore out a warrant for Ropicic, who retaliated by informing on certain residents of the Chatham Hill section for having illegally sold booze. Ropicic is in jail. Officers are running down the clues he has given.
