WASHINGTON NEWS GOSSIP

By CHARLES BROOKS SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—The Bishop of York has taken his departure leaving pleasant memories in addition to a persistent recollection of his knee breeches, cape and trick scuttle hat. This was new for the folk of this town notwithstanding they are used to cosmopolitan celebrities dropping in on them from the four corners of the earth frequently. Six thousands of us jostled into the Corcoran Gallery to give the Most Eminent the casual once over, hear what he had to say, and to shake his hand. The Bishop is a good looking fellow, he left a good impression everywhere he went here. He is also a good talker and his like about the unity of the Anglo-Saxon race in the future is heard. As they are coddling up pretty close to each other right now for self-preservation, the Bishop's prophetic vision appears clear enough. Now that England's great prelate is gone, the town is not altogether so happy. Indeed, it is most happy; joyous and joshing for we have with us now, three individuals who are as eminent in their respective lines as the spiritual-looking Bishop is in his, and more widely known and advertised wherever the cinema flashes than is the good man in his sphere. They are Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. Not since the visit of Pope Joffre has the Capital in its entirety felt such interest as it does in these three screen celebrities. The trio came in direct from Frisco to start their tour as Liberty bond salesman from the Nation's Capital. While that is their business, it may be that Doug can be induced to climb the monument and jump off the top of it on to the back of a horse, as a free exhibition and advertisement for the main Bond show and Charity prevailed upon to show a few tricks with a blacked pie and his funny feet. "Our Mary" will do all that any of us expect of her, if she will just be her own sweet self. Mary's Ma did not come east with her, and Brother Jack has departed from the "lot" to take up training at an army aviation school.

center of large, fashionable apartment buildings and not far distant from the Washington residence of no one other than the illustrious William Jennings Brown. Mrs. Brown has a secure social position in the Capital, which she won for herself when she was leading woman for a stock company at Poli's previous to her marriage. She is an attractive and brilliant woman, possessed of remarkable tact. Her first social entertainment of any formal size to be given in her new home will be during the D. A. R. convention which convenes April 15. She will be member of the convention with credentials from the Kingwood, W. Va., chapter, Kingwood having been her home since the death of her husband.

Some of the members of Congress are repeating a couplet based on a classic with which most folk are familiar. It runs:
"Count that day last whose low descending sun,
See no new job fixed up for McAdoo to run."

Congressman Bowers clipped from some unremembered sheet, a clever bit than that recited McAdoo which he showed to colleagues in the Republican cloakroom. It reads:
"Poor Mr. McAdoo!
Think of the jobs he's hatched up to—
The treasury, the railroad crew,
The income tax, and then a few,
Each week they hand him something new
To tax his time and temper, too.
He has to know when loans are due,
What source to get his millions through.
What fund to pass each dollar to,
Which tax is what, and who is who,
What bonds to sell and what to sue,
Which 'trust' to coax and which to sue,
He stretches out each day to two,
To do the things he has to do,
The job would flounder me or you,
But it's a cinch for McAdoo!"

This town is quite much interested in young Nelson Morris, of the meat-packing Morris of Chicago. Nelson has joined the merry army of $1 per annum recruits whose liveried limousines have joined with the hospital ambulance to make street life in the Capital dangerous. There are some expressions up on the Hill who are just waiting to see if Morris settles down in a bomb-proof job as if he intended to move that the organization be made permanent, before they start chiding him to his direction. This noble son of the also and likewise noble Deut Trust is within the draft age. He claimed exemption before an examining board at home on the grounds that his presence at the packing plants was essential in the highest degree to the continued operation of the industry. Or that pie, the board excused him. Afterward, it is reported, when it voted him to the eligible list, he heard that he had come on to Washington to take a job in the safety zone. Not yet has it been ascertained just what sort of work the young multi-millionaire is to be set at, whether it is at the filling case card indexing, or something more important but equally as safe. Newspaper searches are trying to get the information and some of the congressmen who have it in mind to make an uproar and notoriety for the youthful Chesus have joined in the chase.

Letta Jewel, as she was known on the stage, has bought a handsome residence in an exclusive neighborhood and will settle down in Washington to make this her future home. Miss Jewel is no other than Mrs. William Gray Brown, Jr., the widow of the congressman of that name who represented the Second West Virginia district in the House at the time of his death and for several years prior thereto. The new home is opposite the old Justice Harlan mansion, in the
