Mrs. Pauletta Is Under Arrest

PROBABLY KNOWS MORE ABOUT KILBURN MURDER THAN SHE HAS TOLD.

Little has developed in the Black Hand case today. The inquest started yesterday afternoon. The most that can be said so far is that the statements are repugnant and that each witness fails to support the stories that they have already told.

One of the things brought out yesterday was that some of the gang who are now in custody were living at New England mines at the time Z. M. Reese was assailed and cut up. Mrs. Pauletta, who said yesterday after viewing the corpse of Jim Racheo that he was not the noted leader of the Black Hand society in this part of the country is reputed to have changed her story after getting away from the officials.

Mrs. Pauletta is reported to have told several reliable witnesses that the man in the Cunningham morgue whom she saw was none other than Jim Racheo, alias Julius Ross, who had spread terror among the Italians by his rapacious appetite for blood. His rapacity for human life can be imagined when it is said that he has been responsible for at least fifty murders.

She told of the amorous relations that had existed between her and Racheo and how he had christened her baby. Other matters incident to their lives also was told.

Constable A. R. Riggs went over to Mrs. Pauletta's home in Water street this afternoon and placed him under arrest. She will be given an opportunity to tell what she knows while confronted by the witness to whom she talked after leaving the county officials yesterday.

Jokes About the B. & O. Are to Cease

Tired of being made the continual joke of the stage jester and claiming that there is no longer justification for holding the time and speed of its trains up before the public for ridicule, the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company is making an appeal to a number of vaudeville and burlesque managers of New York city, asking them to have their funny men do away with B. and O. jokes on the stage.

The company claims that the persistent holding up of the B. and O. as an example of what a railroad should not be and the continual cracks taken at its trains is creating a wrong impression in the minds of the public. Moreover, it is claimed that the records of train runs on that road will show that its trains are in fact making an unusually high percentage of schedule runs.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY PARTY GEN. BLISS, COMMANDER ON MEXICAN BORDER, 61 TODAY.

Brigadier-General Tusker Howard Bliss, U. S. A., who was entrusted with the difficult job of suppressing the turbulent tendencies of Uncle Sam's neighbors along the Mexican border, will pass his sixty-first milestone today. Gen. Bliss is a Pennsylvanian by birth, a native of Lewisburg, and a son of the Rev. Dr. Geo. Rippey. The future general received his early education at Lewisburg Academy and Bucknell University, and graduated from the West Point Military Academy in 1875. He specialized in artillery, and is considered an authority on that branch of the United States military service.

sidered an authority on that branch of the United States military service. He was military attaché of the United States legation at Madrid at the outbreak of the war with Spain. He served through the Porto Rico campaign of 1898 as chief of staff to Gen. Wilson. Later he was made collector of customs at the port of Havana and chief of the Cuban customs service during the occupation of the islands by Uncle Sam's troops. After that he served as commander of the departments of Luzon and Mindanao and the division of the Philippines, as president of the Army War College and assistant chief of staff. For some time Gen. Bliss has been the commandant at Fort San Houston, San Antonio, Texas, and has commanded the American forces on the Mexican border, where he was charged with the suppression of the unpleasant Mexican custom of promiscuous shooting across the boundary line. A year ago Gen. Bliss predicted that the success of the rebellion then in progress would probably lead to another. "The conditions across the border which lead to one successful revolution unfortunately seem always to point the way to a counter-revolution," he reported. "If this be the case, the first reasonable hope of continued peace will come when an established government proves strong enough to crush the counter-revolution. The prevalence of the present conditions means the continued occupation of the border by a strong force of troops. The success of the present revolution probably will mean the indefinite continuance of this occupation in anticipation of the counter-revolution." In which Gen. Bliss proved to be a true prophet.

A buffet supper was served during the evening.

The dance hall was elaborately decorated for the event by Manager Wehrle, of the Hayman Greenhouse Co. Groups of pine trees and boughs overhung with holly and mistletoe transformed the scene to that of a pine forest. The lights were shaded in red and an "electric" moon formed red pinpoints that cast a pretty light for the moon specials. In the dining room green and white predominated in the table decorations.
