DUEL ENDS IN DEATH

TWO CHICAGO WOMEN ENGAGE IN MORTAL COMBAT.

Clash with Pistol and Knife—One Found Dead; Other's Injuries Prove Fatal—Evidence of Bloody Battle—Quarrels Had Been Frequent.

Mrs. Julia Tripp was killed and Mrs. Jacob Silvers, of New York, received wounds which later proved fatal as the result of a pistol and knife battle between the two women in Mrs. Tripp's apartments at 5809 Prairie avenue, a fashionable residence district of Chicago, on Wednesday. Mrs. Silvers is a sister-in-law of Mrs. Tripp. It is said her husband left her about three months ago because of her curious actions. Mrs. Tripp is the wife of a superintendent of a manufacturing firm of Chicago.

When the apartment was entered blood was found on the parlor curtains and several pictures had been broken and chairs had been overturned. In a bedroom off the parlor Mrs. Tripp was found lying on the floor fully dressed. Her face and waist were covered with blood and a pool had formed beneath her. She was dead when found.

Separated from this bedroom by porters which had been drawn back was another bedroom. Mrs. Silvers lay on the bed in her own nightgown and covered with blood. Blood was gushing from a deep gash in her foot and she was unconscious.

Mrs. Silvers had been staying at the Tripp home for about a month and the two women are said to have had frequent quarrels, principally over the division of the household duties. They had gone out about 1 o'clock in the afternoon and returned shortly afterward. It had been Mrs. Silvers' custom to take a nap in the afternoon and it was evident she had prepared for this as usual. The appearance almost simultaneously of the two women from different entrances to the apartment, each screaming for help and the knife wounds suffered by both hastened the police to advance the theory that there was a third person in the tragedy instead of its being simply between the two women or a husband and wife.

Napoleon of Traffic World Expires at His Residence in Arden Surrounded by Family.

His end removes from the railroad world of the day its supreme figure. It leaves the greatest railroad system in the world—a system which he himself built up and welded together without head. It marks the closing of a career unique in the financial history of this country. At 34 Mr. Harriman was an office boy; at 23 owner of a seat in the Stock Exchange of New York, and at 35 a millionaire. At 49, though wealthy, he was still a mediocre and in the wider sense unknown. In the ensuing twelve years occurred the meteoric rise that made him the undisputed emperor of the railroad business of the nation. His death at 61 is an event that will make itself felt throughout the entire financial fabric of the world.

While It Has been Known for Weeks That Mr. Harriman Was a Doomed Man,

Stomach trouble was the name given to his illness by his doctors, but during the last three or four weeks the rumor gained wide circulation that he had cancer. It has been intimated by men who were in a position to know that he was afflicted with the same ailment that caused the death of the late William Rainey Harlan, president of the University of Cal-
