[By G. S. NOWLIN, LINCOLN, NEB.] Happy, O happy, were the hours of childhood, When with the maiden I dearly loved Through the green meadow or the shady wild wood. With merry laugh I cheerfully roved; No care or sorrow cast a dark shade As through the woodland daily we strayed, 'Twas there we promised to be true forever. You vowed to love and I to defend, That no misfortune should our hearts dis sever, 'Till closer clinging, love, to one end. Years have passed by like the breath of morning: We have grown old, but hearts are still true. Only the lengthening shadows gave warning That life's brief journey is almost through. We have had sorrows, many and sore, Hushed are the footsteps that fell on the floor, But we have never been quite broken hearted. Love has sustained when storm clouds were high. May we be always together till parted, Always together, my love and I.

CHORUS: We have been always together, nothing our souls can part, Nothing can change the feelings of this quick pulsating heart; You have been faithful ever, loving and fond and true, And I delight in giving my warmest love to you.
