Soda water of Different Makes.

It's a mistake to suppose that because the same names are used for drinks put up by different manufacturers that the goods are identical, either in flavor or strength. The fact that drinks known as Ginger Ale, Lemon Sour, Strawberry, Peach, Root Beer, Cream Soda, and other flavors, are put up by all soft drink manufacturers, is no standard by which to judge quality. One may be far superior in every way to the others. We know our drinks are equal in strength to the best placed upon the market of today and far better than some. The way to judge the merits of flavors is by tasting them, not only in testing them, but by making a COMPARATIVE test.

Knowing that our flavors are "all wool and a yard wide," we invite comparison with others. We make the best goods we can, without regard to standard of competitors, and never do we change a formula unless we find a way to improve it.

We believe that all things being equal, (careful handling of orders and correspondence and fair dealing with customers) QUALITY is sure to win success; not only for us but for all those fair-minded men who handle our goods also, and we solicit patronage on that basis.
