PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

John Lamb, Editor and Publisher.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1901.

It's all up with the artist who can't draw his breath.

Many a man looks insignificant when his wife is with him.

At sea people are willing to give up everything but their lives.

A syndicate is a body of men entirely surrounded by money.

Some people come west to settle; others come to avoid settling.

A girl isn't necessarily timid because she jumps at a proposal.

A remote period is the one due at the end of a woman's remarks.

Many a lasting friendship is due to the distance between the friends.

Men will stand in their own light and get scared at their own shadow.

A man's popularity, like Jonah's gourd, sprouts one day and withers the next.

There is more sin in Cincinnati than in any other city on the face of the earth.

There were a number of heroes among the Biblical characters, but Daniel was the only one lionized.

Much has been said and written, (and more will be next year) about the unequal distribution of wealth.

No odds what sad condition society drifts into, the politician is there to swear that it is the only logical conclusion possible.

Our national life is so complex, our population so heterogeneous and cosmopolitan, our invention so irrepresible that word formation is inevitable.

When you get to that point where you can read everything and believe nothing, you have got humanity reduced down to a common fraction.

At a wedding in Chicago the other day the bride was dressed in red, the groom in white, and her father, who had to pay the bills, in blue. Sort of a patriotic affair.

A man can sit down and think himself into a beautiful Christian feeling, but is is another thing to get out amongst the poor and work yourself into the same holy calm.

Anarchy! Drive it from America! Close the gates against these fellows coming here! Get down to business, Mr. Lawmaker, and do something for the country you profess to love.

That Washington street will always be the principal business thoroughfare of Silver City, no sane person will contradict. Improvements are being made which add greatly to the appearance of several business blocks on that street, the latest of which to deserve mention, is the building put up in front of the telephone office.
