Perhaps it may be the warmer, brighter days, but something has caused a feeling to prevail in Owyhee that this year is going to prove a great one for our mining industries.

Senator Heyburn is reported to have been accorded the privilege of naming a man for a $4,000 job as attorney general for Porto Rico. Well, if Boise lawyers don't ask for that job numerously and clamorously it will be strange.

The two distinguished young gentlemen who entertained a large and select company in San Francisco Monday night, through eleven rounds of brutality did not cause interest enough in our peaceful community to cause a telephone call to inquire which one bested the other. If all the world took as little interest in these brutal affairs more men would try to earn honest livings by work.

The magnificent result achieved by the Anthracite Industrial commission should not blind the public to the fact that this plan of arbitration originated solely with President Roosevelt, who is, therefore deserving of a large portion of the credit due for this happy termination of one of the greatest and most serious strikes that this country has ever known. And it not merely a suggestion on his part, but he persisted in it with the determination characteristic of our chief executive. President Roosevelt has accomplished nothing in his official capacity that should endear him more to the masses of the people than his appointment of the industrial commission which has just closed its labors.

A Big White Mark For Teddy.

Examples of the resourcefulness and forcefulness of President Roosevelt have been given on numerous occasions, but in no instance has the exercise of those qualities been fraught with with greater or more beneficial results, or resulted in a more glorious victory for the rights of labor, than the plan he promulgated for the settlement of the great coal strike and the appointment of a commission to investigate conditions and render a decision on facts presented. By virtue of his office he was not given power by the constitution to proceed as he did. He had no power, constitutional or statutory, to aid him. He had to rely on the force of his own character to bring the operators to time. His plan was presented in such a strong manner, and the justness and righteousness of it made so conspicuous and emphatic, that with the strength of his character back of it, labor's oppressors could do nothing but yield. To oppose the President would be worse for them in the end than any possible decision the commission might render. Labor won a great victory, and President Roosevelt has won unfading laurels. Teddy is filled with ways and means for accomplishing what more timid and less practical statesman would term "impossible things." He always has a way, and the necessary force to put the machinery in motion, and make the way effective
