Sacred Heart, Oklahoma, December 1908

The national vote is over. None of the dreadful calamities predicted by each of the presidential candidates, should he meet with defeat, has yet occurred. If there be any change, it is for the better. The night-riders and the Black Hand society have ceased to make blood-curdling threats and to cast terror and consternation among our peaceful citizens.

"With eyether Taft or Bryan, or with both, or with neyether," says Dooley, "the country is safe."
