

Get That New Victor Gate Now

Soon you will be turning your stock out in the open and then is when you want that new gate ready for business. You have been promising yourself for a long time that you would put on one of those Victor gates that I have talked about so much. Perhaps you have been in to see it. Come in now and get it.

If you haven't seen it, be sure to come in this week if possible, let me show you its strong points—it hasn't any weak points—and tell you the price. The terms on which I will deliver it to you will be so satisfactory that I know you will take it home and you will never be willing to part with it again.

I have but one kind—the Victor, the best.

BILLY'S LAMP SHADE

By LOUISE OLIVER.

May 10th—I am dreadfully unhappy. I cannot really tell whether it is because Billy and I have quarreled or because I am disappointed in Billy. If he did not respect my judgment, why did he ask me to go with him to buy a lamp. The one he wanted was atrocious. It had big brass roses all around the base and the shade was covered with red and purple grapes. There was a very pretty one that I wanted him to buy, with a plain dull brass standard and a dome-shaped shade of green and amber glass.

May 12—I was too unhappy to write yesterday. I sent Billy his ring and then cried all day. I just had to do it. If he doesn't think I know how to buy anything and intends to laugh at whatever I select, I can imagine myself going out with him to buy furniture for our bungalow.

May 14—I haven't heard from Billy. I cannot understand him at all. He has always shown deference to my judgment before. Just a week ago today he complimented me on two gowns that came from Mme. Starr's.

May 15—Very busy. We are packing to go to the country. Not a line from Billy. He hasn't even phoned. It is very queer for him to keep the ring and never ask me if I really meant it.

May 16—Mother and the trunks and servants are gone. I am alone in the city house. Am waiting until the evening train to go with dad.

May 20—The country is lonesome. Not half so pretty as last year. And the house looks bare and empty.

May 23—Went to the postoffice this morning, and coming home I got sick. The sun was hot and I guess I walked too fast.

Just as I reached the little white farm house—the first one beyond ours on the road to the village—I got dizzy and I guess I fainted. When I came too, I was in the parlor of the little house with the nicest, dearest, coziest little country woman fussing over me.

She gave me elderberry wine and made me lie still on the most comfortable red plush sofa.

Then she told me all about herself and "Pappy." How he had been a gardener and she had been cook at the same place for years and years, until the old mistress died and the home was broken up. They had loved each other for a long time, but let the years slide along as some people do without taking things into their own hands. When the old lady died they decided to get married and buy a little farm with their savings. So "Pappy" is not really pappy at all. There are just the two of them. But she says the son of their old mistress is very good to them and comes often to visit. I was very much interested.

When I felt better Pappy drove me home in the wagon.

May 25—I stop in the little farm house every day. Molly and Pappy are darlings. And their house is so cozy with its bright-colored wallpapers and curtains and carpets.

"Don't you have a lamp for your parlor table, Molly?" I asked.

"No, honey," she said; "not yet. It takes time to get everything, you see."

"How would you like one with grapes on?" I asked impulsively.

"Oh, wouldn't it be grand, though, honey! I'd be so proud and stuck up I wouldn't be speakin' to any one. Me with a grape shade lamp and a morning glory phonograph!"

May 26—Oh! I don't know what to write first or how to say it all. There is so much to—but there I will try to get it all down in order.

I got up early and went into town with dad and went straight to Morley's china store, where Billy and I went two weeks ago—it seems like two years! The lamp with the grapes was still there, but was marked "Sold." But the salesman said he would see if they had a duplicate in stock. Sure enough they had, so I paid for it and had it sent out by express.

I did some shopping in town and came home on the 4 o'clock train. On my way from the station I met Pappy and asked him to bring the box. Then I stopped in to congratulate Molly. (I forgot to say it was their anniversary.) She wouldn't let me go till she made me a cup of tea.

Then Pappy drove up to the gate with Billy. And they lifted two boxes out of the wagon instead of one.

Billy was so surprised to see me he waited until Molly had introduced us before he spoke to me at all. She called him "her boy," and he kissed her on both cheeks, told her she was prettier than ever, and said he'd brought her an anniversary present.

So Pappy unpacked the boxes and out came two lamps exactly alike—all covered with grapes and brass roses. I began to cry, and Billy seemed to understand it all in an instant. He is a darling. He just folded me in his arms and kissed me and said he was glad I didn't mean it, and reached in his pocket for my ring. He didn't pay any attention to Molly and Pappy.

100,000 DEVOTEES OF THE SKI

German and Austrian Federations
Alone Number 40,000—Insured
Against Accident.

St. Moritz.—This winter the Alpine army of skiers numbered close upon 100,000 men in central Europe. The German and Austrian federation of the ski have insured their members, who now number 40,000, against accidents with a German firm at nominal rates.

In Switzerland there are over 40,000 persons who employ the ski for sport and even work, while in France and Italy the sport is becoming more popular every winter and the two countries could now account for at least 20,000 devotees of the wooden shoes. This estimate does not include the number of soldiers on skis who in winter guard the mountain frontiers in central Europe across the Alpine passes.

Decollette Gowns Barred.
Washington.—Decollette gowns were barred at a dinner given in honor of Cardinal Gibbons by the Misses Patten. All present wore gowns "cut high."
