Perry F. Loucks returned from the twin cities the latter part of last week, where he had attended to professional business. However, the damage was not as great as it might have been.

Wilbur Fletcher, attending the University of South Dakota, has been chosen to lead the cheering in the athletic games, and particularly in the football games in which the university team participates. A football game without noise all around the exterior would be a very time affair, and Wilbur's special duties will be to see that there is no lack of noise.

An exchange tells the story of a boy who went to market with a sack of rabbits and lingered around town all day. When asked by his mother why he had not sold the rabbits, he said no one had asked him what was in the sack. How many merchants are like this boy? They have plenty of goods for sale, but fail to tell the people what is in the sack.

We clean and press for the gentleman and we dye for the ladies. Walker the Tailor, 296 E. Kemp.

"I wish you would send your paper to our folks for the winter," said a Watertown gentleman the other day to the office manager of The Saturday News. "You see," he went on, "there is more news about Watertown and surrounding community in The Saturday News in a week than appears in any other paper in the county in a month, excluding none. That's why our folks like to get The Saturday News when away from Watertown. They get it boiled down, and as I have already said, more of it than in any other news channel."

"Hobo Day"—although a lot of people wonder why a State College so labels its great field sport day—was a great attraction at Brookings last Saturday, drawing attendance from all the surrounding counties. There was a comparatively large attendance from Watertown, many of Watertown's young people having been students at the State College. The football game was between the State College team and the agricultural college team from North Dakota, the South Dakota boys winning practically "in a walk."

Upon motion of State's Attorney Haugen, the criminal cases against E. L. Denis, proprietor of the West Hotel, and M. D. Staton, were dismissed in circuit court by Judge Sherwood Monday. Mr. Haugen said that one of the principal witnesses for the state had left the city and that another witness cannot be relied upon to tell the truth, hence he asked for dismissal. He intimated, in this connection, that information could be filed and had been filed, with reference to matters of a later date than those involved in the action for which he asked dismissal.

The democrats had a rally Friday evening, having received assurances of the election of Mr. Wilson. About all the musicians that could be scraped together were employed to furnish the music. The principal feature of the parade was that which included General Mark W. Sheafe leading a donkey on which sat W. W. Wilson, better known as "Woodrow" Wilson. The donkey emitted a succession of brays now and then which but added to the amusement of the spectators and caused a discordant tremor to run through the band music. Various short speeches were made at the Goss hall following the unique parade.

Herman Obenauf and George Leary brakemen on the St. Louis railroad, have been bound over to appear in federal court. They were brought before Judge Nicholson, the United States commissioner, on the charge of stealing beer in transit. They are charged with having broken into freight cars and taking beer therefrom, presumably for the purpose of selling the same, inasmuch as it was claimed that they had stolen several hundred bottles of the liquid. The men were held in bonds in the sum of $500 each and until their bonds were signed were turned over to United States Marshal Clausen.

Mrs. Lottie Kruckman arrived in the city from California a few days since, having come to be with her mother during the winter. Mrs. Howie not enjoying the best of health, Mr. Kruckman will "paddle his own canoe" in the west during the winter, where he is engaged in the real estate business. It will be recalled that Mr. and Mrs. Kruckman started for the west in their car, but, having encountered some very bad roads before they passed through the gumbo regions west of the Missouri river, they sold their auto and covered the balance of the journey by train.

We used to get eggs for 5 cents per dozen; they now cost us 36 cents and before the winter is over—if the war continues and the hens' strike is not called off—they will cost 40 cents or better right here where we grow 'em! Then again, there's the old rooster we used to purchase for 10 cents which now costs us anywhere from 75 cents to $1. Flour, meats, potatoes, butter, milk—the common necessities of life—are higher than a cat's back, but the price of the country newspaper in 99 out of every 100 cases, has remained stationary at the old $1.50 rate. The printer is up against it good and hard and the only salvation for him is to raise his rates and prices.—Exchange.

Mr. E. Overgaard, secretary and treasurer of the South Dakota Packing and Shipping Co., arrived last Saturday from Sioux Falls, whither he had gone to complete the details for removing his family to this city, so that he might enjoy the pleasures of home life while attending to the office management of the company's interests. Mrs. Overgaard will be extended a most cordial welcome to the city, with the hope that she may find her residence here to be as congenial as it was in her former home. Mr. Overgaard, as stated heretofore, was connected with the packing plant at Sioux Falls for some time, but for the two or three years preceding his removal to this city was connected with one of the leading banks of the southern city.

Quite a bunch of Watertown boys went down to Sioux Falls last Saturday morning to witness the football game between the South Dakota university and Notre Dame. The latter won by a considerable score against the South Dakota boys. Some of the Watertown spectators were inclined to think that the university lads lacked training along the lines essential to win from a good team, such as Notre Dame. The Watertown contingent states, however, that there was every evidence that the chief of the cheering "gang", who was Wilbur Fletcher, had been sufficiently trained.

The editor took in a few dollars on subscription, says an exchange, and blew it all in on eatables, determined to get filled up for once. And such a dinner as he did eat. After the feast he waddled over to the office and sat down in the old easy chair. In a few minutes the door opened and several townsmen entered, announcing a desire to pay up back subscriptions and a few years in advance. Other followed quickly and in a short time the office was crowded and the noise of clinking dollars was almost deafening. Out in front two farmers were asking as to where the editor wished them to deposit the loads of pork and potatoes they had hauled in, and edging their way through the crowd in the office, four of the leading merchants shouted a request for advertising contracts, signing up for generous lots of space. Things were progressing in this manner for some time and the editor began to see his way toward meeting expenses. Just as he reached for the fourth receipt book he fell out of the chair and woke up. But such a heavenly dream.
